FOLDING BEDS

You Can Do Almost Anything

With our Gosben folding bed. There used to be an idea that two into one wouldn't go; this bed upsets the notion completely. It doesn't, like the chameleon, change its color, but it does change its character, and it is as handsome as a bed at night as it is as a book-case in the day-time. It is one of the happiest combinations of modern ingenuity, and in an instant it turns your sleeping apartment into a handsomely appointed library. Perhaps you have an idea that this double advantage carries with it a double cost. It does not. Call and see it and learn the price.

TOM PLATT

Has Found Where He Is At.

Campaign Was Not Properly Handled.

Miller, Depew and Tracy Were Dead Weights.

No Business to Fight on National Issues.

A Quiet Roast From the Man Whom Esteemed Republicans Claimed Was Placated.

New York, Nov. 11.—Ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt returned from his home in Owego, Tioga county, yesterday morning. In an interview last night regarding the outcome of the election, he said:

"In looking over the defeat it has been suggested to my mind that President Harrison was beaten in this state by about the same majority which overwhelmed J. Sloat Fassett, the republican candidate for governor last fall. All newspaper readers will recall that Mr. Fassett made his campaign issue the fight against Tammany hal.

"In this he was supported by some of the republican leaders in the state. Others objected to that line of policy and Gov. Hill, who took the stump against my young friend Fussett, made every attempt to divert the issue into national channels. It is sad to relate that some of my old republican friends believed that Mr. Fassett should have accepted the gage of battle thrown down by Gov. Hill. Mr. Fassett and his friends, though, stuck to the one issue. In that campaign the republican vote in New York city was larger than it has been in this presidential fight. It was a ringing issue, and the republicans were cheered on by it. This year the McKinley law was the issue and what has been the result? The republican vote in New York and Kings and in all the counties except those in the southern tier, fell adown miserably. I do not wish to go further in this matter just at this time, except to add that in my opinion had the old fight against Tammany been continued we would have had better results in the state. Yet, speaking of the McKinley law, I venture the prediction that if the democratic party attempts to tinker the tariff there will be another political revolution four years from now."

Mr. Platt went over the counties of the southern tier, which he said plainly showed that all republicans in the southern tier were loyal no matter what the issue was. On the other hand among the counties which show the loss is Herkimer, dominated by ex-Senator Miller, which has a loss of 402.

In Kings, where Secretary Tracy has been active for four years, the republican loss is 16,445. Strange to say the loss in New York county, Mr. Platt attributed to Mr. Depew. Of all the counties in the state, those dominated by the Platt element were the only ones which kept their end up and showed a gain.

Mr. Platt said that he felt very sorry indeed for the party, and ,of course, he was chagrined over the defeat and the retirement of President Harrison to private life.

WAY DOWN IN CHILE

The People Are Cheering for Grover.

They Know That It Means That Pat Egan Will Get a Vacation.

New York, Nov. 11.—A special cablegram to the Herald from Valparaiso says: There is great rejoicing in Chile over the election of Cleveland as president of the United States. Both here and at Santiago flags are flying from the residences of Americans, and Chilean citizens are sending congratulatory telegrams to their American friends expressing the hope that an American gentleman will be sent as minister to Chile.

The evening papers here and at Santiago comment favorably on the result of the election.

The papers at Buenos Ayres also rejoice at the election of Cleveland, and say that Harrison's defeat means a conciliatory policy toward the South American republics and a lack of aggression on the part of the United States.

President Montt has been in conference with the leaders of the conservative party. They say they are not strong enough to form a cabinet unless they can form a coalition with some wing of the liberals. The present cabinet will retain office for the time being at the request of President Montt.

MYER-M'AULIFFE.

They Will Do Battle in Chicago.

A Six Round Go To Be Had in December.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—Arrangements were completed yesterday for Billy Myer and Jack McAuliffe to meet December 10 at the Second Regiment armory in a six-round go on their merits.

When Alf Kennedy was in New York before the Godfrey-Choynski fight he met McAuliffe and suggested a 10-round go between him and Myer to take place in Chicago.

McAuliffe was not willing to go that long, but agreed to meet Myer in a six-round contest.

MEXICO.

The Tariff Reformers Are Cheering for Cleveland.

City of Mexico, Nov. 11.—News of Cleveland's election is received by tariff reformers in Mexico with great satisfaction and as certain to strengthen them in their contest against monopolies. Mexican protectionists have employed the stock arguments of the American high tariff party and the complete rout of that party is a tremendous blow to them.

Mr. Cleveland is greatly admired in this country as a statesman and as a friend of Mexico, with whose president he has always been on pleasant terms. Mexican people consider Mr. Cleveland as desirous of cultivating friendly relations with them, and they believe that during his previous administration he did much to prevent a collision between the two countries.

European business men here do not like his election, regarding it as likely to promote the growth of American trade with this country. This is the only element that finds no satisfaction in the triumph of the great tariff reformer in the United States.

NORTH DAKOTA.

It Has Cast Its Vote for General Weaver.

Grand Forks, N. D., Nov. 11.—Later returns, mostly official, give Shortridge, fusion candidate for governor, 1,680 majority, and the rest of the fusion state ticket and Weaver electoral ticket slightly less.

PREVENTION OF VICE.

New York, Nov. 11.—No clue has so far been obtained to the identity of the individual or individuals who, for some time past, have been sending letters with immoral designs in view to immigrants delayed at the landing on Ellis island. The Society for the Prevention of Vice has raked up the matter, and Detective Groden, who is employed to guard the immigrants, is making a determined effort to trace the vile communications to their source.

THE ANARCHISTS.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—This is a day of sad recollections amongst the members of the advanced radical group of this city. It is the fifth anniversary of the execution of Spies, Parsons, Engel, Fisher, the leaders of the anarchist agitation which culminated in the terrible Haymarket riot and its loss of life. There will be gatherings in memoriam in this city to-night, as well as in Detroit, New York, and in many cities abroad.

OUT OF DANGER.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—It is announced that Hon. B. B. Herbert, founder of the National Editorial association, and editor of the National Journalist, who, some weeks ago, was terribly mangled and injured by being caught in an elevator, is now out of danger, although some months will elapse before he will be able to leave his room.

BETTER STAY AT HOME

M. Du Sommerard Coming to America

To Be Connected With the French Exhibit.

His Career in This Country in 1876 Recalled by His Appointment.

New York, Nov. 11.—The announcement that M. du Sommerard, who was one of the commissaires generaux of the French department of the centennial of 1876, and Capt. Anfrye, who was the deputy commissioner for the French republic to that exposition, will probably be identified with the French section of the world's Columbian exposition, has served to call to mind an episode connected with their official relations to this country at that time, and which created considerable of an international sensation.

It was in August, 1876, that an extraordinary letter was published in a number of German newspapers, and which, it was claimed, had been written by M. du Sommerard to a friend in Germany.

In this letter it was claimed that a slight fire, which had occurred a short time ago in the main building of the Centennial was an act of incendiarism on the part of the Americans, who had set fire to the building containing the French packing cases with the hope of destroying the French merchandise; that the attendants were thieves without exception who stole openly from the French department; and that not only did the judges (i. e. the magistrates) palliate these acts, but they actually participated in and sometimes promoted the robberies referred to.

Not content with these assertions, du Sommerard made a vile and brutal attack upon the manners and virtue of American women. Immediately upon its publication in Germany the letter was telegraphed to the Paris Figaro, and thence cabled across the water.

Its publication in the newspapers of this country created a sensation, followed by a storm of indignation. The late Hon. Elihu H. Washburne, who was at that time United States Minister to France, was prompt to act.

After apprising the state department at Washington of the statements contained in the letter, he penned a vigorous remonstrance to Marshal McMahon, who was at that time president of the French republic.

In the meantime, both the Comte de Brisbach and Capt. Anfrye, the French commissioners at Philadelphia, had hastened to deny that any charges had been contained in their official reports to the minister of agriculture and commerce, who was president of the French commission, upon which du Sommerard could have based his statements, although Capt. Anfrye admitted that he had frequently been compelled to complain of the insulting action of the Centennial guards, of their discourteous conduct toward French exhibitors, of numerous robberies from the French department, and likewise admitted that he had been compelled to call upon the French government for ten members of the Paris provincial police to do guard duty in the French section.

Du Sommerard, on his part, claimed that the letter had been greatly magnified, but an apology for his action was made by the French government, and the sensation finally subsided. For the remainder of the period during which the Centennial remained open, however, the relations between the American and French commissions, so far as the boundaries of Fairmount park were concerned, were decidedly frigid.

Now that it is reported that the Frenchman in question will be identified with the French department at the world's fair the episode has been called to mind, and the feeling is strongly expressed in commercial and other circles having relations with the sister republics that it would not be good policy to identify any of those concerned in the affair in question with the control of the French exhibit.

THE STRIKE IS OFF.

New Orleans Labor Trouble Settled.

The Conditions Upon Which the Men Went Back to Their Places.

New Orleans, Nov. 11.—At 2 o'clock this morning the strike was declared off. It is agreed:

1. That the laborers who went out on strike on October 22, 1892, shall be taken back to their employment as soon as they offer their services insofar as it does not conflict with contracts already made.

2. Wages and hours to be arbitrated.

3. It is further agreed that the merchants, boss draymen and other employers obligate themselves not to make any unjust discrimination against union men, but always give their applications for employment fairest consideration. The merchants and other employers reserving to themselves the right to deal directly with their men.

The parties to this agreement declare that they will use their best endeavors to adjust any differences which may result or may have resulted from any strike made from sympathy with the strike herein above referred to in accordance with the above terms.

BYRON RITCHIE!

He Has Been Elected To Congress.

Official Figures Give Him a Majority.

Boodle Did Not Prevail in Lucas.

A Noble Fight and Glorious Victory.

The Man of the Masses and Not of the Classes Has Showed the Bosses a Trick or Two.

Byron Ritchie has been elected to congress from this district.

The official figures prove this statement.

Byron's the Boy.

Wood county comes in this morning and gives Ashley only 474 majority.

Fulton county gives Ashley 821.

Lucas county gives Ashley 55.

Ottawa county gives Ritchie 1,364.

And Byron Ritchie is elected by 14 majority.

The vote as it now stands is as follows:

County.	Ritchie.	Ashley.
Lucas	.....	55
Wood	.....	474
Fulton	.....	821
Ottawa	1,364	.....
	1,364	1,351
Ritchie's majority...		14

Congressman-Elect, Byron F. Ritchie.

Byron F. Ritchie is the son of Hon. J. M. Ritchie, ex-congressman from the Toledo district, and was born in Grafton, O., on January 29, 1853. He came to Toledo seven years later and took up studies in the public schools. When 17 years of age Mr. Ritchie graduated from the high school and subsequently entered the office of the Toledo Gaslight company. While thus engaged he prosecuted during the evenings, the study of law under the tutorship of his father.

In 1874 he was chosen clerk of the board of education, succeeding Hon. I. P. Pugsley, and the same year he was admitted to the bar. Later on he became the junior member in the law firm of Ritchie, Howe & Ritchie, and continued so until 1880 when his father, Hon. J. M. Ritchie, was elected to congress.

Since that time Mr. Ritchie has practiced alone and has succeeded in working up a most lucrative business.

He was married April 11, 1878, to Miss Kate I. Taylor, of Williamsburg, Ind., and has one daughter. With the exception of being once a candidate for prosecuting attorney of Lucas county, Mr. Ritchie has always refused official preferments until receiving the nomination for congress. He is a prominent member of the Toledo lodge of Elks.

THE STATE OF OHIO

Has Undoubtedly Gone Democratic,

But the Official Vote Must Tell How Much.

A General Impression That the State Ticket Is With the National Ticket.

Cincinnati, Nov. 11.—The Commercial-Gazette this morning says:

Ohio remains this morning in the list of doubtful states, though it must be confessed that as far as the presidential electors are concerned she has a decided democratic leaning. Nothing less than the official vote can determine the result.

The Enquirer (dem.) says:

While the democratic managers believe that the state has cast her vote for Cleveland and Stevenson, they still advise all to wait the official count. The figures are very close and the plurality will be but a few hundred either way. Both sides are earnestly watching, and both show a praiseworthy determination to ascertain the will of the people as expressed Tuesday and to announce it at the earliest possible moment. There must be a square deal.

The Post (ind.) says:

Both parties claim the state, but a revision of the figures favors the democrats more than the republicans on the state ticket.

The official returns may possibly result in a division of the electoral vote. The congressional delegation stands as announced, 11 democrats and 10 republicans.

HALL-FITZSIMMONS.

New York, Nov. 11.—A cable dispatch was received in this city last night, which stated Hall had agreed to fight Fitzsimmons at the Crescent Athletic club in New Orleans for the $45,000 purse offered by that organization. The dispatch added that Charley Mitchell was willing to fight for the $50,000 purse offered by the New Orleans club and that the men would sign articles just as soon as they reached them.

BYRON TURNS ASHLEY'S PICTURE TOWARDS THE WALL.

THERE'S A HEREAFTER.

Platt and Dave Martin To Be Arrested

For Conspiring to Prevent Democrats From Voting at the Late Election.

New York, Nov. 11.—A Herald special from Troy, N. Y., says: Thomas C. Platt, of New York, and David Martin, of Pennsylvania, may be arrested and tried on a charge of conspiring to prevent democrats form voting.

A number of local republican leaders, including Representative Quackenbush, Archie Aston, F. E. Bonsted and Zeph T. Magill, are said to be implicated.

THE NEXT CONGRESS.

Some Figures Which Show Where Republicans Are At.

Washington, Nov. 11.—An analysis of the congressional election returns shows that with returns missing from 20 districts in which the result is entirely unknown or is very close the democrats have elected to seats in the house of representatives for the Fifty-third congress 88 more representatives than the republicans. This majority does not include nine members -elect who are classified as either fusionists or third party men, nearly every one of whom will act with the democrats in any proposed reduction of tariff taxes. Their support, with the additional strength the democrats are certain to derive from securing some of the 20 districts put in the unknown column, make it conservative to estimate that the democrats will have a majority of 100 members or more on the most important question likely to come before the next house of representatives, viz: a revision of the McKinley tariff law.

A number of fusionists are also thoroughly in accord with the democratic policy, as far as it goes, on all other questions. For instance, McLaurin, of South Carolina, and Pence and Bell, of Colorado, who are classified with the third party men, are in general accord with the democratic platform, save that on the currency question the first named has alliance ideas and the two last named are radical free coinage men. Three out of five of the fusionists elected in Kansas are also simply democrats of what may be called the radical wing of the party.

Leaving out the 20 unknown districts, the next house will consist of 207 democrats, 120 republicans and nine fusionists or third party men.

An analysis by sections of the vote last Tuesday for congressmen shows that the southern states, Maryland, Missouri and Kentucky being included in this category, will send 117 democrats, only four republicans and one alliance democrat, McLaurin, of South Carolina, to the next house, with four districts, two in West Virginia, one each in Kentucky and Missouri, in doubt. Of the four republican congressmen returned, two come from Tennessee, and one each from Kentucky and Missouri. The only appearent result of the fight made against the democracy in the south was to strengthen its hold on public affairs. In North Carolina, Cheatham, the colored republican, is defeated after surviving the landslide two years ago, and in Alabama a solid democratic delegation is returned, nothwithstanding the efforts of Mr. Magee and others to split it.

Of New England's 27 votes in the next house, the republicans get 17 and the democrats 6, three coming from Massachusetts and three from Connecticut. The Second New Hampshire district is placed in the doubtful column.

The four middle states, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, have 73 votes in the house, of which number the republicans will cast 39 and the democrats 34.

Fifty-six congressmen will be returned from the middle western states of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. According to the returns, democrats will represent 32 of the districts, republicans 23, and one, the Sixteenth Ohio, at present represented by Pearson (dem.), is said to be exceedingly close.

Although this is the only doubtful district named in press dispatches from these states, experience warrants the belief that other districts will be found to be doubtful as the official count progresses, several districts being always nip and tuck between the two parties.

The states of the northwest, and the agricultural west, beyond the Mississippi river, will send 29 republicans, 14 democrats and five fusionists to represent it in the next house, with two districts from Nebraska in doubt and the entire seven from Minnesota placed in the same column for lack of information as to the successful candidates. The republicans stand the best chance of securing a majority from the nine unknown districts. The five fusionists come from Kansas. It is said that with the exception of Davis and Baker the fusionists are inclined towards democracy. The silver states of Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Nevada, and Colorado split even on the congressional election, three republicans coming from these three states first named and three fusionists from the two later states. Newlands of Virginia, however, is inclined towards republicanism.

The Pacific coast is entitled to eleven congressmen, Washington and Oregon each send two republicans and California will send four democrats and perhaps more, three districts being close between the two old parties. The following is a table by states:

	Dem.	Rep.	Fus'n or third party.	Unk'n or very close.
Alabama	9	..	..	..

WITHOUT CLEARANCE.

A Steamer Sails Contrary to the Laws.

New York, Nov. 11.—A special from La Guayra, Venezuela, to the Herald says: The Red Line steamer Philadelphia sails from here to-night with only consular clearance papers, the Venezuelan government having refused to clear the ship.

Among the passengers on the Philadelphia when she sailed from here was Senor Mijares, who has been governor of Caracas under the continuist's regime. The government authorities demanded that he be surrendered on a charge that while governor of Caracas he had stolen cattle.

The captain of the Philadelphia refused to give him up and when the police attempted to board the ship and search for Mijares they were resisted. The Philadelphia then left her dock and anchored in the stream, while the question was referred to United States Minister Scruggs. He upheld the captain in refusing to give up Mijares on the ground that there was no extradition treaty between Venezuela and the United States. The government then decided to refuse the Philadelphia and she sailed without regular papers.

EMBEZZLEMENT.

Vienna, Nov. 11.—Dr. Raindl, who is legal adviser to the Emperor Francis Joseph, and is one of the best known lawyers in Austria has been put in prison on the charge of misappropriating half a million florins entrusted to his charge. The arrest has caused a great sensation in Vienna. Raindl, who has been living beyond his income on money entrusted to his charge, is reported to be utterly broken down.

MINNE CONGRESSMEN.

Minneapolis, Nov. 11.—The following is the list of congressmen elected from this state:

First district, J. A. Tawney, republican; Second, James T. McCleary, republican; Third, O. M. Hall, democrat, re-elected; Fourth, A. R. Kiefer, republican; Fifth, L. O. Fletcher, republican; Sixth, doubtful, probably Mr. Baldwin, democrat; Seventh, Henry Fog, republican.

FLOODS.

Paris, Nov. 11.—Floods are again causing much damage in the south of France. Several rivers in the department of Pyrenees orientales have overflowed their banks and Perpignan, the capital of the department is threatened with inundation. The losses in this department are already heavy.

HORRIBLE DEATH.

Hot Lead Poured Into a Man's Ear.

He Had Been Cruel to His Fellow Men,

And One of Them Killed Him Out of Revenge—A Most Sensational Affair.

Boise City, Idaho, Nov. 11.—A peculiar tragedy occurred on Sunday last near Junction Crossing on Clear Water river. Four Hungarian placer miners, who had by reckless use of quicksilver, become badly salivated, had employed a man named Zochorousky to nurse them.

The latter treated the four unfortunates in a brutal manner, and he took special pleasure in abusing one of the quartet known as "Peter the Hun."

Zachorousky openly boasted that when his countrymen died, which would not be at a very late day, he would come into possession of their mining claims, which are quite valuable.

On Sunday night Zachorousky slept in the cabin of his coutrymen. Next morning he was found cold in death. He was lying on his back, his eyes and mouth wide open and a peculiar expression of agony resting upon his swarthy face.

The Hungarians denied all knowledge of how he met his death, but at the inquest Dr. James Poulsen performed an autopsy and discovered that death had been caused by the injection of more than an ounce of molten solder into the right auditory canal. The scalding metal had burned its way thence into the brain.

On being closely questioned "Peter, the Hun," confessed that he had poured the hot metal into the right ear of Zachorousky while the latter was asleep. He said he did it in revenge for the cruel treatment which he and his companions had received from the dead man.

TALK WITH ASHLEY.

He Explains How the Thing Was Done.

Every Man Who Voted for Him Got All It Was Worth, and That's More Than Ritchie Can Say.

A Bee, tired with writing democratic majorities, sat dozing in an office chair when Gov. Ashley entered and touched him on the shoulder.

"Why, how de do?" exclaimed the Bee, starting up. "Really, Mr. Ashley, we're sorry for you, but we had to do it, you know."

"Sorry?" returned the governor. "Well, you are no more sorry than I am. I'm sorry all through, from stem to stern. I don't understand it at all. I opened barrels enough. It's very queer that with all the money I spent that I should run behind instead of ahead. I don't mind telling you, not for publication, however, that this thing cost me $40,000. I'm positive that that upstrat Ritchie didn't drop any such sum if he put up anything, even 40 cents. Every vote I received was a good honest one. I paid for everything I got and for a good deal I didn't get. My, but there was a big hole somewhere. Why, I and my boy kept shelling out till you couldn't rest. I see my mistake now. They was working us, and just kept the stuff in their pockets. I wish now we had sugared the republican committee, perhaps a little would have leaked through to the honest voter.

"Ritchie had lots of gall to run against me. Why, I was conducting things down at Washington along with Lincoln when Ritchie was a drooling, spewing baby—and how I hate babies. I've kissed them, the sticky things, during the campaign, but you bet I'm done now. They can all go to the devil; I'm going to New York. Somehow or other Toledo don't appreciate me—Ohio's too democratic these days for any sensible person—after what I've done for the city, too! The ingrates. Now that I'm talking I might as well tell you what did it. It was those beastly descriptive articles in the Blade along with its boastful editorials and high-toned police court attorney references. The kindergarten over there on the corner made a mess of the whole thing, and you see where it's put me—me!—me, who loved you all so well." And he faded out of sight as the Bee awoke and commenced adding up Ritchie's majority again for the second edition.

MYSTERIOUSLY MISSING.

Waterbury, Conn., Nov. 11.—On October 19, James W. Carson, of Torrington, disappeared and his family failed to make the matter known, believing that he was visiting some relatives. Now they believe he has committed suicide. Yesterday they sent out a general alarm. He had been subject to pains in the head, which his family say were due to worrying about business matters. He was a prominent citizen, a leader in society and a member of the Y. M. C. A.

WON BY BUCCANEER.

London, Nov. 11.—The match race between Lord Roslyn's 4-year-old brown gelding Buccaneer and Col. North's 6-year-old bay horse Nunthrope, was won to-day by Buccaneer.

A STRONG PERFORMANCE.

Downing as Othello—This Evening the Gladiator Will Be Presented

Wheeler's was crowded last evening when Robert Downing appeared in Othello. It was a grand performance. Robert Downing has taken a place on the American stage that no one will dispute him. His interpretation of the moor was a strong one throughout, and his work was thoroughly appreciated as the applause after every speech and the curtain calls throughout the evening testified. The work of Eugenie Blair was no less meritorious. The support is strong. Especially good was the acting of Frederick Mosley as Iago; David C. Bangs, who handled the character of Roderigo the dupe, skillfully, and Florence Erwin as Emilia. She showed her full strength in the last act. Mr. Mosley almost shared honors with the star.

The play was presented with special scenery and elegant costumes.

This evening the Gladiator will be performed. The advance sale is large and indications are that there will be a large audience. Dowling certainly deserves it.

LILLIUOKALANI.

She Has a Hard Time With Her People.

Not a Cent With Which to Pay Her Government Employes.

San Francisco, Nov. 11.—A letter from Honolulu dated October 21, says:

"Business is at a standstill, the government employes have not been paid for the last month, the appropriation bill is through the second reading and queen and legislature are at loggerheads.

"That is the situation as the Gaelic leaves this evening. The queen insists on the appointment of her own cabinet. The last cabinet, consisting of Cornwall, Gulick, Creighton, and Nawahi, was removed in just two hours and 20 minutes after it was announced.

"The opposition will not allow an enabling act passed to pay current expenses. The opposition, composed of at least 26 members, will recognize no cabinet that is not formed by one of the majority, and furthermore, any cabinet formed must first be submitted to the members of the opposition for approval. This means that all matters are to be at a standstill till the queen accedes to the principle laid down by the opposition.

Personally the members of the opposition are distasteful to the queen. She is reported to have said that before she would acknowledge this principle she would cede the kingdom to the United States.

CONDITION OF CROPS.

The Monthly Review Issued by the Department of Agriculture.

Washington, Nov. 11.—The crop report issued by the agricultural department to-day shows the average yield for corn in the seven states as follows: Indiana, 28; Illinois, 25.8; Iowa, 28; Missouri, 28; Kansas, 23.3; Nebraska, 28.7. The average yield of buckwheat is 14.1 bushels per acre; in New York, 14.7; Pennsylvania, 14.5; Wisconsin, 13.5; Iowa, 10.7.

The crop returns of November to the department of agriculture with those of October indicate the yield of the year of the principal food products, and point approximately to the perfected estimates at the close of the year. The yield of corn averages by November returns 22.4 bushels per acre, and promises an aggregate production of a little more than 1,600,000,000 bushels, while the other great bread grain, wheat, by the returns of last month pointed to a product based on acreage investigation nearly perfected not exceeding 500,000,000 with a possibility of shrinkage in the spring and a certainty of light weight. In the northern states of the Atlantic coast the crop ripened well. In the cotton states it was injured somewhat by excessive moisture, causing rot and mould, and in some districts it was shortened by the drouth. In Ohio the crop is well cured, but chaffy from drying too rapidly. Yield is very uneven, ranging from ten to sixty bushels per acre. The Indiana product is in good condition on early planted areas, and better than was expected on late planting and in view of the long continued drouth. The local yields are extremely variable. There is much complaint of lightness of ears and looseness in the cob in Illinois, and the same variability in yield and quality elsewhere. It is well dried out and undamaged by drouth. Some was injured by being cut and shocked too early. There is much chaffy corn and the average weight will be light. Iowa corn has ripened well, heavy frosts being delayed till the last week of October, but late planted is shriveled from the rapid drying of immature ears. Part of the crop is good and sound and a part very light. The low lying areas were damaged irretrivably by the excessive moisture of early summer. Wet weather in spring and drouth in summer reduced quantity and quality in Missouri. The average in Kansas is reduced by the low average of seed corn, which is, of course, included in the aggregate. Low or bottom lands here yielded better than uplands, as the season was too dry for a large part of the breadth. Scorching winds in June injured the crop materially.

In Kansas the crop is light. The tubers are small as a rule and rotting considerably in New York and throughout the west. The yield of tobacco is less than last year, the average being reported at 623 pounds per acre of all kinds against 748 last year. The average yield of hay is 1.17 tons per acre, nearly the same as in 1891.

COLONEL POORMAN'S VIEWS.

The Secretary of State Names the Causes of the Republican Defeat.

Columbus, Nov. 11.—Second to Gov. McKinley no man in Ohio is better able to expound the doctrines of protective tariff than Col. C. L. Poorman, secretary of state, and the defeated candidate for congress in the Sixteenth district. He is the author of a recent campaign volume on protection, and has views upon the "Waterloo" worthy of consideration. Said Col. Poorman to your correspondent: "The present astounding political result is due, in my judgment, to three principal causes. First—Democrat politicians have steadily and persistently asserted that the money and the industrial policies of the republican party were in the interest of the rich and against the interest of labor, and that under them the country was fast drifting into two classes—millionaires and paupers. Labor organization leaders have encouraged this view of things and created unrest and discontent among the labor classes. Second—For years the advocates of free trade have insisted that protection was exclusively in the interest of capital, and worked an injury rather than a benefit to labor, enhancing the prices of products without correspondingly advancing the wages of labor. In the past two years this claim has been persistently pressed, and in connection with it the further one that even if protection did help labor by taxing imported goods the free admission of foreign labor more than counterbalanced all benefits. Third—Upon these points there have been constant and earnest appeals to the prejudice of the labor population, and all fluctuations in prices, disturbances between labor and capital, and every unfortunate incident and accident has been utilized to intensify the prejudice. Everywhere the effects of this were visible among the working classes that in sullen silence or outspoken discontent indicated the purpose to have a change. The result was just as unexpected to the democrats as to the republicans."

CLOSE CALL.

Deming, N. M., Nov. 11.—The troops in pursuit of the "Kid" and his band of renegade Indians surprised the savages while at camp just across the Arizona lines and about 100 miles west of here. The Indians were preparing breakfast when a picket discovered the soldiers approaching and gave the alarm. The renegades jumped into their saddles and fled into the canyons, leaving their breakfast untouched.

Our to-day's visit to the offices of the Central Ohio and Home Insurance companies and Smith & Company, in the Bee building, pleased us, their busy, regular course of affairs denoting a pleasant and flourishing attitude, and the information of their success and the paying of their losses and other obligations promptly and satisfactorily, and the investing of the steadily increasing surplus funds in local and other choice collaterals, bespeaks solidity and management of the right sort, and in the way of good reputation at home and abroad. We are highly pleased with these business accessions to Toledo, and know that the community will come to enjoy and appreciate them more and more in years to come, as they know them and see their substantial transactions and growth as a Toledo institution.

Get ready for the jollification next Tuesday night.

Mr. W. H. Bovier of Toledo was married at Defiance this week to Miss Cora Moorhead.

The Ladies' Mandolin club will meet at Prof. Newberg's studio Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The subject of the lecture in the temple this evening is: "Some Reasons Why Israel is Imperishable."

The Old Fogy Dancing club has the first of a series of six parties at Odd Fellows' temple this evening.

Classes in dancing under the direction of Mrs. Wheeler, will meet Friday, at 7:30 p. m., Pythian Castle.

Deputy County Auditor Stein is to-day wearing his picture of Grandfather's hat surrounded by a badge of crape.

Rev. J. W. Donnan is still conducting revival meetings at the Monroe street M. E. church, with gratifying success.

Come over to the Cleveland celebration at Dolan's, 1002 Starr avenue, East Toledo, Saturday night. All welcome.

An excellent program has been arranged for a social and concert to be given at the Bartlett street church this evening.

Master house painters will hold the regular meeting this evening at 8 o'clock p. m. in the rooms of the Builders' Exchange.

The Ohio Yacht club will hold its regular meeting this evening. Important business will be transacted and a large attendance is desired.

Great interest is being manifested in the entertainment to be given at the Y. M. C. A. hall this evening. The wax works will be great.

A report on the streets this afternoon that Judge Pugsley was defeated seems to be unfounded. The official returns are not all in, but Mr. Pugsley's friends claim his election by 291.

The two dromios, Whit McMahon and Stanley Thurston, of Bowling Green, are out several hundred dollars on the election They were so foolish as to bet on Indiana, New York, and general results. They are much sadder and wiser men by this time.

Mrs. Florence Richards, of Toledo, grand vice templar of the Good Templars of Ohio, delivered the last of three excellent lectures in the coffee rooms last evening. She is by far the best speaker on the temperance question Tiffin people have listened to for a long time. Her descriptions were vivid and her eloquent plea for the home was irresistible. The meetings were attended by large audiences. She went from here to Findlay.—Tiffin Advertiser.

Return for the Defendant.

In common pleas court to-day, in the case of Herman Buchele against Briggs & Leibius, the jury returned a verdict for the defendant. Buchele sued for $20,000 personal injury.

Sued the Blade Company.

Lee E. House, in common pleas court, to-day sued the Toledo Blade company, publishers of a daily paper, known as the Toledo Blade, to recover $5,000 damages for alleged libel.

O. Y. C. To-Night.

The monthly meeting of the Ohio Yacht club will be held this evening. No postals were sent to members for this meeting as the directors decided that newspaper notices would be sufficient. A large attendance is desired.

It Is Councilman Jacobson.

City Clerk Lamb met with the board of elections this morning to canvass the vote in the Second ward for councilman. Jacobson is elected sure enough, and can now crow it loudly over Gov. Ashley.

Has Made a Good Member.

The mayor will name Captain P. H. Dowling for reappointment to the workhouse board at the first joint session of the aldermen and councilmen. His honor says of Captain Dowling: "He has been a valuable member there."

Here's an Opportunity.

Some young woman, desirous of obtaining a kindergartner's course of training, without money, and who can play light piano music, and sing, in leading young children's voices, may obtain the "course" for her services of three hours daily by applying at 2113 Cherry street.

Cole Being Congratulated.

Hon. L. C. Cole, of Bowling Green, is in the city to-day receiving congratulations over the fact that he is the first democrat from this district that has ever had the honor and distinction of casting an electoral vote for a democratic presidential candidate.

Naval Reserve Tuesday.

If the naval reserve is mustered in arrangements will be made to give them quarters in the new armory building. A meeting of the naval boys will be held Tuesday evening at which time the constitution will be adopted. The movement of organizing naval reserves is spreading over the lakes, but Toledo is in line first.

Highway Sneak Thieves.

Last evening about 8 o'clock, while a young lady, whose name could not be learned, was passing Joseph Gaites' drug store, two young ruffians snatched her pocketbook and started off on a run before those in the immediate vicinity could interfere. There were $4 in the pocketbook and some papers. She was much distressed over the loss of the papers.

His Cup Is Overflowing.

A sad-eyed republican was walking down Madison street this morning when he was accosted by a good democrat.

"Why, my boy," said the latter, "don't take it so hard, you've had your turn, you know."

"Yes, I know, but that ain't all."

"Not all?"

"No, I use city gas also. My cup of woe is full."

The Redding-Weber Nuptials.

Mr. George Weber, the modest and congenial receiving teller in the Ketcham National bank, was quietly married election day to Miss Minnie L. Redding, of 1237 Erie street, Rev. S. D. Hunsinpiller officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Weber left for an extended wedding trip, and their many friends will extend to them congratulations and best wishes.

Brethren, Let Us Pray.

J. E. Gilson yesterday received from his brother-in-law, who resides in Baltimore, Md., the following telegram:

"Surely all is over,
When Ohio goes for Grover.
Where are you at?"

The reply sent was nearly as good, being as follows:

"Yes, Ohio's fallen in,
With McKinley and his tin.
Let us pray."

A Man of Fish and Fishing.

Mr. J. E. Gunckel, the man who knows more about fish in this part of the country than any other living person, has been notified to-day that the American Fisheries society is invited to hold its next meeting in the world's fair fish and fisheries building. Mr. Gunckel has been appointed on the committee to make arrangements for that meeting. The annual book of the society, a neat volume of 190 pages, gives Mr. Gunckel's paper on "Fish and Fishing In Ohio" the position of honor. It opens the volume.

Has Been Granted a Patent.

A patent has been granted to Alonzo Noteman, of this city, for an apparatus and process for making gas from the products of petroleum oil. Mr. Noteman has additional applications pending in the patent office.

A Fire.

A run was made by the fire department at 12:44 p. m. A two-story frame at 435 Floyd street was discovered in flames. The house is occupied by W. Blackwood. No one was at home. The firemen had a hard time getting at the fire. About $500 damage was done.

City Salaries "O. K."

City officials and employes are a bit anxious about the ordinance carrying their salaries for the present month, as the council has not been taking up any ordinances. Though two-thirds of the members should not be present to suspend the rules and rush the ordinance, it can be read a first time when a majority is present, and special meetings can be held for the second and third readings. By calling two special meetings it could thus be passed in three successive nights.

City Elections.

Expectation is alive on the subject of probable city elections to be occasioned by the resignations of those members of the council who have been found guilty, or who have pleaded guilty to attempts at bribery. The mayor has not yet received the resignation of any except Mr. Tanner, whose place is filled by the election of Mr. Jacobson. He expects, however, that the others will resign and that the elections to fill vacancies can all be held on the same day.

The Bond Is Signed.

Street Commissioner Bower will now be called upon to answer in probate court to the charge of malfeasance in office.

The Bee announced a short time ago that the necessary papers had been filed according to law.

The bond for costs was yesterday fixed by Judge Millard at $300.

The bond was signed to-day by the following named gentlemen: H. R. Lee, W. R. Hodge, Michael Graham, L. W. Morris, A. C. Osborne and F. Coleman.

No Vestibuled Cars.

David Robison, of the Toledo Electric Street Railway company, was asked if he was getting any vestibuled cars, and replied that he was not. He was then asked if a law to compel the use of such cars was not passed by the last legislature. He answered that some crank had brought in such a bill but he didn't think it passed. If it did he wouldn't put on the cars any way, for the reason that in weather like that of Wednesday night the motor man could see nothing because of snow sticking to the glass, and there would be a dozen accidents in a single trip.

The Cowdrick Case.

The Cowdrick case has excited unusual interest since its pending in police court.

Arthur Cowdrick was arrested some time ago, charged with cutting down a shade tree in front of the high school building on Madison street.

Cowdrick, by his attorney, claims that the license issued by the street commissioner permitted him to move houses, gave him the right to cut down trees to accomplish his purpose.

A dozen property owners were in court and testified during the trial. The state was represented by Geo. P. Kirby and J. D. Ford. The case has been submitted to the court and a decision will be rendered to-morrow.

Toledo Rifles Trip the Light Fantastic.

The Toledo Rifles gave their eighth complimentary social hop last evening, in Memorial hall.

The attendance was large and the occasion was a jolly one.

Lieut. and Mrs. L. W. Howard led the grand march, and Tony Leon's orchestra furnished the music for the merry dancers.

Credit is due the following committees for the success of the affair: Reception—Capt. R. S. Holbrook, Lieut. L. W. Howard and Second Lieut. S. R. Stanberg.

Floor Committee—F. J. Roth, Sergt. J. E. Banks, C. A. Morrison, H. J. Howard, C. J. Kane, F. Vosburg and Private L. Matthews.

Arrangements—Sergts. J. E. Banks, C. J. Kane and C. A. Morrison, and Corporal F. Mantz and Private L. Matthews.

Tenth Anniversary of Concord Lodge.

The tenth anniversary of Concord lodge, No. 149, K. of P., was celebrated last evening at Pythian Castle with an entertainment and ball. Only the members of the lodge and their ladies were present, numbering about 500 in all. G. M. Davis was master of ceremonies. An excellent program was rendered, the following artists participating: The Misses Bessie Hall, Gertude Smith, and Flora Gidley, and Messrs. E. L. Twing, W. S. Buckhout and J. E. McGinnis.

The program was concluded with several stereopticon views, after which a merry dance was indulged in. The Pythian sisters served an elegant supper at midnight.

The arrangements committee comprised J. H. Barnes, F. B. Lazenby, Joseph F. Grosswiler. The floor committee comprised C. C. Ruppel, Frank Bostwick, J. D. Wiggins, Chas. Skelden, W. H. Taylor, D. G. Hartsing, D. B. Gilmore, M. L. Hoag, O. Hall, jr., F. A. Todd, H. Van Ormer and C. E. Tual. The occasion was an exceedingly pleasant one.

Foot Ball.

Matthew McClung, captain of the Lehigh football eleven, is a cousin of the McClung of Yale fame. This is his fourth year on the field. He is naturally a football player and is worthy of being at the head of a team like the Lehighs.

Michigan's scores so far this season have been:
Michigan, 74; M. A. A. of Detroit, 0.
Michigan, 68; M. A. A. of Detroit, 0.
Michigan, 10; Wisconsin, 0.
Michigan, 6; Minnesota, 14.
Michigan, 18; De Pauw, 6.
Michigan, 0; Purdue, 24.
Michigan, 10; Northwestern, 12.
Michigan, 60; Alion, S.
Michigan, 0; Cornell, 44.

In Lehigh's game with Cornell in the first part of the season the score was 70 to 0 in Cornell's favor. Of course Lehigh has improved vastly since then, and it is judged from the scores made by Cornell against both Lehigh's and Michigan elevens, that the two latter teams are very evenly matched. Truly our citizens may look forward to the game on Saturday as being a very interesting one. Michigan's Alumni will have a chance to show their patriotism at the Olympic park on Saturday. Let every old "boy" be on hand with his flag of yellow and blue.

On Saturday last Lehigh played Lafayette, of Pennsylvania, the score standing 4 to 0. The score with the University of Pennsylvania indicates that the team has made great progress since it met Cornell. We will see how it compares with a representative western team on Saturday.

W. W. Pearson, one of the greatest ground gainers in the country, will play left tackle for Michigan in the Michigan-Lehigh game at the Olympic park.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY.

There Will Be a Jollification Next Monday Night.

Next Moday night the democrats of Bowling Green will hold an old-time rally and general jubilee over the victory.

Congressman Ritchie and other prominent speakers will be present, and a grand time is anticipated.

POSTAGE CLERKS.

Class Examination in this District—Clerks Pictures.

The report of case examinations of postal clerks in the Fifth division during October, shows that 1,077 clerks, examined at 202 different times, handled 362,694 cards, of which 351,891, or 97.02 per cent. were thrown correctly; 10,058 wrong, and 745 were not known. Toledo had eight examinations of 69 clerks, who handled 8,495 cards; 8,390 or 98.76 per cent. correctly; threw 98 wrong and did not know 7. The only better percentages obtained were at Memphis, 99.44, and Columbus, 98.83.

Eight of those examined made 100 per cent., or no errors. They were: M. H. McCord, Cincinnati & St. Loui., on Kansas counties; J. C. Dunwoody, Chicago & Cincinnati, on Wisconsin & Maine; A. N. Rice (voluntary) Cincinnati & Chattanooga, on Georgia scheme; E. H. James Louisville and Memphis, on Kentucky section B routes; E. C. Darling, Cin. & St. L., on same; Leo Portman, Lousiville & Memphis, on Kentucky section, A route; H. W. Allen, Nash. & Montg., on Tennessee section A routes; and C. T. Deer, Chic. & Cin., on Indiana section A routes.

Railway postal clerks are notified to send photographs of themselves to headquarters so that photographic commissions may be issued before the first of the year, and are informed that no commission will be issued without photograph.

TROUBLE IN BUFFALO.

Warrants for the Arrest of Election Officers.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 11.—The official count of the vote of this city and county was completed last night and the democrats were given the disputed offices of superintendent of education and district attorney. Love and Bissell, the democratic candidates, were declared to have majorities of 48 and 25 respectively. The republicans charge that the most barefaced frauds have been perpetrated and produce the affidavits of an election inspector to the effect that the returns from the First district of the Eleventh ward were altered 100 votes in favor of Love. Another affidavit stated that in the Third district of the second ward the returns were falsified to the extent of 42 votes. On the strength of the latter affidavit the five inspectors of election in the district named were this morning arrested and locked up at police station. It appears that the returns from these districts in particular, filed in the city clerk's and county clerk's offices, do not agree, and afford convincing proof that crooked work has been done. The cases will be taken into court and fought to the end.

The county, official, gives Cleveland 93 plurality. The city gave him 831 plurality and the towns gave Harrison 738 plurality.

HEAVY WEATHER.

London, Nov. 11.—The steamship Canadian from Baltimore, October 22, has arrived in the Clyde with a story of terrific weather at sea. Almost from the day that the Canadian lost sight of the American coast it was tossed about by a continuous storm. Waves swept over the decks and 48 cattle perished within 48 hours. The steamer made slow and laborious progress and at times was threatened with destruction. There was no other disaster but the loss of the cattle.

The Hygienic Treatment of Constipation and Ordinary Dyspepsia.

Sir John Andrews, the English professor, believes that in the vast majority of cases constipation may be successfully overcome by taking a teaspoonful of the genuine imported Carsbad Sprudel Salt dissolved in a tumblerful of water (half a pint), cold or hot, early in the morning, and, if necessary, on going to bed.

LATE MARKETS.

The receipts at Toledo to-day are 36,672 bu. less than on the corresponding Friday in 1891.

The northwest receipts are 60,205 bu. less, and at five other western points 97,322 bu. more than in 1891.

The Government Crop Report.

Undoubtedly the government report on wheat and corn is moderately bullish, and yet presents no new feature except the estimate of the grand total of wheat at 500,000,000 bu. when the trade had previously adopted 250,000,000 bu. as the crop. We cannot quite discover the process of arriving at Col. Dodge's result, but we suppose it will be made the final estimate. What he says about poor qualities and light weights was known very well months since.

The corn averages are about coincident with public opinion which had already reduced the previous estimate, by the results of the husking. If it were not for the enormous stocks out of farmer's hands and making a dead weight in sight of all the world, prices would naturally appreciate.

The government crop report is construed as a bullish paper, on wheat, and prices have improved. At Chicago the December future has been 1 5-8c up, but about 1c represents the average during the forenoon.

Corn has been firmer, and the fluctuations have been upward, but no change has occurred worth noting. It is a weather market for the present, as to this grain—receipts depending on the weather, and the price depending largely on the receipts. The market is firm for wheat and a shade lower for corn.

In New York December wheat closed at 77 5-8c, a gain of 1 1-8c; May at 84 5-8c, a gain of 1c. December corn at 50 7-8c, a gain of 1-4c; May at 53 3-4c, a gain of 1-8c. November oats at 36 1-2c, a gain of 1-4c.

In Chicago November wheat closed at 73c, a gain of 1 5-8c; December at 74c, a gain of 1 1-4c; May at 79 5-8c, a gain of 1 1-8c. November corn at 42c, December at 42 1-4c, May at 47 5-8c, a loss on each of 1-4c. November oats at 31 1-2c, a gain of 1-4c.

In Toledo a good firm tone of sentiment prevails, and there has been more orders and more activity in the speculative dealings in wheat. Prices have improved. Chicago bears are probably responsible for a fake report that Col. Dodge had denied reporting upon the wheat crop, but it is too attenuated, and had no effect. On the call December wheat sold at 74c, and May at 80 1-8 to 80 1-4c. On the regular board December sold at 74 1-4 to 75 1-8c, and closed at 75c, a gain of 1 1-4c. May sold at 80 1-4 to 81 1-8c, and closed at 81c, a gain of 1 1-4c. Cash wheat was firmly held. Offering slight. No. 2 soft sold at 73 1-4c early and at the close 74c was the price, a gain of 1 1-2c. No. 3 soft sold at 65 1-2 to 67, a gain of 1 1-2; No. 4 soft at 58 Wabash; rejected No. 1 at 63; No. 2 at 54 L. S.; mixed No. 2 at 70 3-4; hard No. 2 at 69 1-4; No. 3 at 63 3-4.

Corn, No. 2 about 43 1-2; No. 3 yellow at 43 1-2. Rye, No. 2 at 58; rejected at 38.

Clover seed was firm, fairly active and futures about 10c higher at close and 15c higher after 'change. January sold at $7.42 1-2 to $7.50; March at $7.60 and after 'change at $7.65; No. 2 at $7.20 to $7.25.

ANOTHER DEAL.

New York, Nov. 11.—A Philadelphia special to the Press says: The next Reading deal is said to be already in sight, and involves the purchase of a controlling interest in the Baltimore & Ohio. The voting trust established when Mr. Bacon purchased the city of Baltimore holdings will soon expire, and Reading people are reported to be picking up the receipts. President McLeod, of the Reading, is in New York and it is impossible to get a confirmation of the rumor.

CHASED BY A BUFFALO.

There came near being a tragedy at Golden Gate Park the other day, the circumstances of which might have caused the event to be ludicrous were it not for the fact that the episode for a brief period was fraught with much danger to an over-venturesome youth who desired to closely study the habits of the humped inhabitant of the plains while in a state of captivity.

At the buffalo paddock there is usually on Sunday afternoons a crowd of people, and in every crowd there is always to be found one or more who delight in poking the animals with a cane when they approach the fence, just to see how they will act. So frequent did the practice of annoying the buffalo become that to preserve their respective tempers and prevent their eyes from being punched out, a park policeman was detailed to especially look after the buffalo and deer paddocks. Even then the cruel practice did not stop, and several arrests were made.

Recently a young man recklessly entered the enclosure and very soon had his hands full of trouble. He climbed the fence on the opposite side of the paddock from where Officer Dearborn was standing, and was seen by no one until the animals discovered his presence.

The callow youth had made up his mind to pet Baby Ruth, the young buffalo calf, and slowly and cautiously made his way toward the youngster, which was lying in the shade quite a distance from the larger buffaloes which were dozing and lazily chewing their cud in the shelter of a large tree.

Suddenly everybody was startled at hearing a bleat of fear and alarm from the calf, which came scampering down toward the cow. Instantly Bill Bunker and Ben Harrison were on their feet. The cow saw the bushes move a little distance off and charged on the young man, who ran toward the fence to make his escape. But the cow overtook him, and striking him with terrific force from the rear sent him sprawling into the brush. By this time the two male buffaloes had joined the cow ready to lend assistance and with loud bellowing continually charged at the thicket where the youth had managed to crawl. Luckily for him he was knocked into a place where the brush is high and thick, and found a secure hiding place where the enraged buffaloes could not see him.

Time and again the fiery-eyed animals charged at the brush, which they could not penetrate, giving vent to hoarse bellowings and pawing up the earth in their frantic rage at not being able to reach him. Nothing could be done at the time to rescue the foolish youth from his perilous sposition, as it would be certain death to enter the paddock among the angry buffaloes, so Policeman Dearborn called out to him to lie still until the angered beasts quieted down. After waiting a half hour, during which the buffaloes circled around the thicket a number of times and made many attempts to get at their tormentor, they retired and allowed the trembling and badly bruised youth to escape.

Policeman Dearborn decided not to arrest the young man, who gave the name of George Griffiths, as he had been taught a good lesson and doubtless one that he will remember.—San Francisco Examiner.

Mud baths were common among the ancients, the mud on the seashore and the slime of rivers, being especially prized for this purpose. The Tartars and Egyptians still use them in certain diseases. They are taken by people at many places on the continent of Europe, among which may be named Driburg, Eilsen, Neundorf, Pyrmont, Spa, Marienbad, Franzensbraun, Eger, Kissingen and Teplitz.

THE PHANTOM COACH.

A Ghost Story Right from the Emerald Isle.

Some years ago I received and accepted an invitation to spend a few weeks with some friends at their residence, Mount Coote, county of Limerick, Ireland. I arrived one evening just as that function known as "afternoon tea" was taking place, and was in the full enjoyment of a cup of the beverage and an accompaniment of hot cakes when I heard a carriage approaching the house at a rapid rate and finally draw up at the front door. Thinking that I was in no condition to meet strangers, for my hostess had insisted on my slipping down to tea in my traveling suit, which was a rough tweed, I said:

"Mrs. Rogers, if you will permit me to escape before your visitors come in I would like to change."

"Pray don't disturb yourself," she answered, "that is only the 'phantom coach.'"

"The 'phantom coach,'" I repeated, thinking that I had not heard aright or that she was joking.

"Yes, the 'phantom coach.' I assure you there is nothing there."

"But," I answered, "I can hear the horses pawing the ground and champing their bits," and moreover, the bell had scarcely ceased to ring.

"Well," she said, "if you don't believe me, go and look for yourself;" and taking advantage of her permission, for I was thoroughly mystified and equally incredulous, I went and opened the front door. Sure enough, as Mrs. Rogers had told me, there was nothing to be seen, and all the while the sounds of jingling harness were distinctly audible. I closed the door and returned to the parlor. My hostess, no doubt amused at my startled expression, asked me if I was satisfied. I admitted that in a sense I was; that is, as far as the correctness of her assertion was concerned, but said:

"Surely you don't believe in a phantom coach driving up to your door?"

"Believe it? Of course I do. Why every one in the neighborhood knows all about it, and you see that the servants are so accustomed to the circumstance that they never even trouble to answer the door."

Shortly afterward her husband came in, and on being told of it laughed heartily at my discomfiture, adding: "Oh, don't let that worry you. You will soon get accustomed to it."

I did soon get accustomed to it, but nevertheless the matter worried me very considerably. I puzzled over it again and again, and thought that I had solved the matter by the theory of an echo, but investigation proved that no one for miles around was possessed of anything more pretentious than a one-horse trap, for, large as some of the estates were, none of their owners could afford to keep anything better. Moreover, the fact of the door bell being rung remained.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

FROLICS OF A MARQUIS.

The Son of the Duke of Gordon Had a Passion for Counterfeiting People of the Lower Order

A favorite frolic of the late marquis of Huntley was to counterfeit the characters of the lower orders; and he was such an adept in that art that his most intimate associates, and even his own father, could not recognize him.

He made a wager that he would obtain a supply of both meat and money from his father without being detected in the character he would assume.

Having clapped himself out with meal packs and wallets, and all the appendages of a gabberunzie, he selected the time when he knew his father would be walking in the long avenue leading to Gordon castle. The father and son met, and the latter acted his part so admirably that he was ordered to go into the castle and partake of the substantial victuals and good cheer set apart for poor strangers.

The marquis, after enjoying the repast without being discovered by the servants, again placed himself in a situation where his father would have to pass him; and, on his approach, solicited "two or three bawbees to buy sneeshin." His father gave him a sixpence, when the marquis, laughing, observed, "Was a saxpence a' that the duke of Gordon could afford to gi'e to the marquis of Huntley?"—Toronto Mail.

ESQUIMAUX DO NOT DREAM.

"The Physiology of Dream" was expounded to a large audience of ladies and gentlemen at the Royal Institution in an intensely interesting manner by Dr. B. W. Richardson, says the London Telegraph. Evidently the doctor holds with Prospero, that "we are such stuff as dreams are made of." Similar provocative conditions, he showed, produce a similar class of dreams. Fevers and certain soporific drugs created a curious kind of mental activity, in which an exaltation of ideas was usually the most marked feature. Warmth promoted dreams, cold chilled them; hence it was that the Asiatics were rich dreamers and the Esquimaux slept as sound as icebergs. Dreams were owing to nervous motion, and it was the nerves that acted as the gas-taps of the sensation currents.

SOCIAL WHIMS.

Dinner tables and conversaziones are the places for wit, humor and brilliant talks and general bonhomie between guests. The funny or droll man in society is not the elegant gentleman. Calls are not suitable occasions for an interchange of gravity or carefully premeditated opinions, and calls should not be extended beyond 15 minutes unless the guest is assisting with the tea. The formal custom of bidding guests to call again, whether man or woman, is now in disuse. It is understood that calls are expected after one invitation or permission, either verbal or by card, has been given. At formal at homes or afternoon teas gloves are always worn except by such as sit by the tea urn.

How about the "sunlight of fame," Mr. Ashley?

Columbus discovered America; Cleveland recovered it.

Oh, for a Tammany Hall organization in Lucas county.

That picture of Ashley, Nichols and Howard was a hoodoo.

It does look as if Mr. McKinley was deader politically than even the old Hat itself.

Where is Peck at? New York's labor commissioner seems to be lost in the shuffle.

Never mind how it was done. Sufficient is it to know that it was done, and pretty effectually, too.

Tom Reed says the Minneapolis convention was an organized blunder. Correct, Tom, correct.

Tom Platt, in an interview, thinks the McKinley bill was too much for the republicans to stand.

Fremont Arford, who made a noble run in the Findlay district, will very likely write P. M. after his name.

It took something more substantial than the statement of being "Lincoln's friend" to win in the Ninth district.

Secretary Tracy mustered up enough courage to attend the launch of the new cruiser Cincinnati at Brooklyn.

When Tom Platt says the campaign was not properly managed, it means that Tom was not properly placated.

Ashley's plurality is slender but it is enough.—Blade.

Not quite. Ritchie's is, though.

Col. Bill Taylor's nomination, which was heralded by the republican press as a joke, proved quite a serious one.

Toledo harbor will receive attention before that of Frankfort, Mich., now that Byron Ritchie's election is assured.

The Dayton Journal cried scat in big black letters all through the campaign, while it had a rat in its pantry all the time.

L. C. Cole, Frank Baldwin, John W. Canary and other Wood county democrats are to be congratulated on their effective labors.

It was nip and tuck for a little while on congressman in this district, but tuck comes out of the fight triumphantly and grandly.

Tammany has brought forth fruits meet for repentance, and is entitled to the fullest consideration in the distribution of the plums.

In the passing of compliments Larry Neal ought not to be forgotten. It was his pen which indicted the tariff plank in the national platform.

A general impression prevails that ex-Governor Campbell will be one of President Cleveland's cabinet. Ohioans would appreciate the honor without regard to party.

Never in the history of Lucas county has there been such a lavish expenditure of money on the part of the republicans during the campaign. Boodle does not always win.

We wish to remark that the present time is a good one to consider the foolishness of betting.—Blade.

Yes, particularly when you bet on the wrong horse.

Hon. Leander C. Cole, of Wood county, will have the pleasure of casting the vote of the Ninth Ohio district in the electoral college for Grover Cleveland and Adlai E. Stevenson.

Foul-mouthed Joe Cannon, of Illinois, succeeded in being elected to congress again. He was repudiated two years ago by an enormous majority in a heavy republican district.

Did not Judge Scribner do a splendid job of running in a republican district with over 2,000 majority? The judge began late in life as a sprinter, but he is not to be sneezed at.

It is not the first time Wood county has helped out Lucas, and the pulling down by the official count of Ashley's 492 to 474 added to the list of favors received. Send in for anything wanted.

Wonder what the Norwalk Reflector thinks of Johnson and Wickham by this time. The popularity of these gentlemen was high before election, according to the Reflector, but where are they at now?.

Democracy has been singing the old old hymn "There Shall be Showers of Blessings," for a long time, until it seemed as if such would never be, and fortunately they came along all right in thunderous form on Tuesday.

Connecticut voters this time elected the governor counted out by the last legislature by a majority that will not allow the politicians to repeat the performance. The democratic majority over all opposition tickets reaches 2,000.

Attorney-General Miller is of the opinion that it was the policy of the administration and not its personnel that was condemned on Tuesday. It makes but little difference, since the personnel retires with the policy.

It is refreshing to hear our republican friends wish that the democratic party may secure control of the United States senate. A pinch of salt might be taken with the expressions, but Barkis is willing for such a state of things to come to pass.

Fourteen majority is not as deep as a well, nor as wide as a church door, but when it is considered that Byron Ritchie wiped out a republican majority of nearly two thousand and secured 14 majority, the magnitude of the victory can hardly be measured.

News has not yet reached the Bee office that all the manufacturing concerns in Toledo and elsewhere about the country had closed down for four years because of Tuesday's election. Probably there was nothing in the campaign declaration that they would.

Toledo & Ann Arbor railroad men should now call a meeting and ask Ashley to fulfill his promise to settle all discriminations after the election, whether he was elected or not. His fear of being accused of influencing votes if he acted before the election appears to have been groundless.

Col. Shepard is great on Scriptural texts, hence the Chicago Times is moved to suggest this one from the Good Book as appropriate to the situation: "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord." The sacrilegious paper fears the Colonel may not see the last sentence.

The present is an excellent time for the democrats of this city to get their heads together to arrange for a plan of organization for the party which will do away with the great amount of work now required to be done in a few days preceding each election. This is always unsatisfactory, and it seems entirely feasible to make a change.

Judge Ridgely, of the Tiffin district, did not profit greatly by the legerdemain of his friends in securing his endorsement by the people's party, since John W. Schaufelberger, his democratic opponent, secured the necessary majority to allow of his wearing the ermine at the conclusion of Ridgely's term. Here's to Judge Schaufelberger.

The Blade's scribbler has evidently had too much—election. Hearken to this sentence:

"If the generation of men in Toledo who have not read history do not realize much a place in the chronicles of this nation Gov. Ashley has, his colleagues in congress do."

The services of Dr. Tobey are evidently in demand on the corner.

Hurrah for Harrison! He secured the presidential nomination from the republican party by the aid of office-holders, and the party conducted the campaign on the strength of the office-holding influence and the power of money contributed by protected industrial barons, thereby securing the condemnation of the American people and inviting deserved defeat.

"Treachery in the republican ranks" is the reason given by the evening organ for Ashley's defeat, and continues that this ought not to have been so since Jim was the choice of a majority of the reps. Herein lies the mistake; he was far from being the choice of a majority of the party, and this was shown as soon as the opportunity was presented.

Hurrah for McKinley. He insisted upon a robber tariff act, made his party believe that the fat-frying of 1888 would be repeated on a larger scale, with success; proclaimed the protection policy in season and out of season; stumped on that issue in other states, thereby helping to lose them to the republicans, and left his own state to be captured by the democrats.

The Germans of Illinois are receiving a severe scoring from the Illinois republican newspapers because of the unanimous support given Cleveland and Altgeld. The articles will undoubtedly go into democratic scrap books for use in the future. So long as the Germans pinned their faith to the republican cause, praise was uttered without stint, but how different after rebellion. 'Twas ever thus.

The great body of the voters, without regard to party, desired that the judiciary should be kept aloof from politics. C. P. Wickham and a number of others, insisted that because of the big republican majority, one of their number should be allowed to draw the salary. There was sufficient warning that the scheme would fail, but the ring paid no heed to it. The day of reckoning came on Tuesday, however, and as a result Judge Scribner not only wiped out the adverse majority, but secured a majority of nearly six hundred. It is hoped the lesson will have a good effect for the future.

The election has left the democrats of Ohio in excellent shape for the future. Saying nothing of the fight against Ashley in Lucas, think of how things are in Fulton, where an auditor was elected; Wood, which comes up with a democratic sheriff; Hancock with its straight ticket; ditto Van Wert, Defiance, Henry, and Paulding. Then think of Hamilton county, which elects an auditor and coroner with the help of republican voters; and Cuyahoga, with a solid county ticket and Tom Johnson's success. Then look at Mahoning electing the entire democratic county ticket, an event which has not occurred since the war. Oh, well, let it go at that. Will there not be scores for the republicans to settle next fall?

The political landslide of Tuesday can have but one interpretation. It is an emphatic proclamation of the supremacy of the people—the common people. The exercise of superior intelligence by the masses, as illustrated in the overwhelming defeat of the party of fraud and force, is a renewed promise of the continuance of a government of the people, for the people, and by the people.

It was a prompt and earnest protest against the iniquitous system of taxing the many in the interests of the few. It was pre-eminently a victory for tariff reform.

It was, in brief, an uprising of the people against a self-constituted aristocracy, whose sole excuse for existence lay in power secured not by virtue of worth, but through the efficacy of wealth.

A system of legalized robbery that made a Carnegie a possibility has been condemned.

A platform in which the chief plank was daylight robbery of the toiler has been shattered.

A party that depended on a Davenport and a Martin for political existence has been squelched.

This is the essence of the result of Tuesday's election, and in it is a lesson that all who run may read.

A TIMELY SUGGESTION.

One of the most pronounced and ardent Cleveland democrats has expressed the hope that no man in his party would so bemean and belittle himself as to expose any caricatures of President Harrison.

Immediately after the election of Mr. Harrison in 1888, several prominent partisan republicans in this city absolutely disgraced themselves and their party by posting outrageous pictures of Mr. Cleveland.

One of these worthies was glad to remove the cartoons from his window to avoid having his establishment mobbed.

Two years after Mr. Harrison's accession to the presidency, there was still posted in a conspicuous place in the office of a prominent and wealthy republican of Toledo a most disgraceful, battered and bandaged caricature of Mr. Cleveland. The Bee believes no democrat will be so regardless of decency as to indulge in such an outrage upon President Harrison.

ASHLEY'S DEFEAT—RITCHIE'S ELECTION.

The defeat of James M. Ashley and the election of Byron F. Ritchie is one of the greatest of the many great personal triumphs achieved on Tuesday.

The Bee is not disposed to rub it in, so to speak, on the beaten man, but in the defeat of James M. Ashley it rejoices with democrats and republicans alike in the result.

The plea of the organ on the corner that Ashley's election was a necessity for Toledo was repudiated, not by democrats alone, but by the best element of the republican party in Lucas county.

Ashley's defeat illustrates the fact, and it is a fact worth remembering, that money is not all-powerful. Capturing conventions does not suffice.

In the election of Mr. Ritchie the people have made no mistake. He is a clean-handed, clear-headed young man, who will work vigorously and faithfully for the interests of Toledo and the district.

He is also ambitious, energetic and honest, with the prospects of a bright career before him, and the Bee stands sponsor for the assurance that he will not mar that prospect by any act of omission or commission that would cast the slightest stain on the high office with which he has been honored.

Congressman Ritchie, accept our congratulations on your well-earned victory.

"YOUR FIGURES AGREE

With Mine," 'Phones Jim Ashley to Harry King.

The board of elections, acting as canvassing board, last evening finished the scrutiny of the vote of the city. The only contest in which doubt seemed to exist was that for congress. In the afternoon a change in precinct F of the Third ward had taken five votes from Ritchie. Later a change in precinct H of the Eighth ward took ten votes from Ashley. These changes were from the figures given in the summary statements from the precincts on the night of election day, and to the figures on the tally sheets, on which the canvass was conducted. They gave an advantage of five votes to Ritchie, making his majority in the city 51.

This morning the canvass of the vote in the townships was proceeded with. The only change in the congressional vote was the reduction of Ashley by one vote in the Third ward of Maumee. This with the changes in the city, giving five to Ritchie, reduced Ashley's majority in Lucas county to 55. The result was telephoned by Secretary King, of the board, to young Jim Ashley, who asked if Mr. King made out Ritchie's majority in the district to be 13. Mr. King answered that he did, and young Jim said that was what he made it, Mr. King saying, "Your figures agree with mine."

The total congressional vote in Lucas is: Ritchie, 10,409; Ashley, 10,464; Ashley's majority, 55.

The vote has been canvassed as far as and including circuit judge, without material change. The people's party vote for presidential electors in the county was 198; that for secretary of state 209. The prohibition vote for presidential electors was 181; that for secretary of state 280.

A Good Day for Coons.

Laid to Rest.

"Four years more of Grover" will turf the republicans over. They feel "turf" enough now as it is, but have yet to learn how it goes to try to dig out from under the sod of the political wilderness for about forty years.—Sandusky Journal.

Amen!!

"With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphans, to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Ask Brown and Waldorf.

The result of Tuesday's election was like a clap of thunder from a clear sky to the federal office holders. The place hunters and place holders have acted as though the union of the federal machine with combined capital was impregnable, but they found the wrath of the people was a power able to conquer selfishness and greed. The result of the election was a crushing blow at centralization of power. It was a notice given in unmistakable terms that the scheming politicians and grasping monopolies can go just so far and no farther.—Cleveland Plaindealer.

NOT THIS YEAR, THANK YOU.

But with Gov. Ashley in congress, even with the republican minority, he will be a power. If the generation of men in Toledo who have not read history, do not realize much a place in the chronicles of this nation Gov. Ashley has, his colleagues in congress do. He will do for the district just what the Blade has said he would—secure for it all possible appropriations and attend to its interests without fear or favor. Then, with a record which cannot be assailed, those men who have so long opposed him, must bow in acknowledgement of their untenable position. We know that to-day the district rejoices over Ashley's election.—The Blade, last night.

GRAND SOCIAL EVENT.

Mr. and Miss Amelia Brand Have a Dual Birthday Celebration.

The social event of the season was a dual birthday celebration held at Odd Fellows' temple last evening.

By a strange and singularly happy coincidence, Mr. Adolph Brand and Miss Amelia Brand reached their majorities yesterday. The brother being 21 and the sister 18 years old.

In honor of the event Miss Brand, an elder sister, and Mr. C. R. Brand gave an elaborate dancing party at Odd Fellows' temple last evening.

Miss Brand, the hostess, was assisted by the following ladies in receiving the guests: Miss Emma Uhlein, Milwaukee, Wis.; Miss Lyda Darnstatter, Detroit, and Miss Fischer, Adrian.

Wolff's full orchestra furnished excellent music for the dancing.

An elaborate luncheon, served by Mrs. J. H. Beatty, was one of the features of the evening's festivities.

THE DETWILER MILL

Is in Operation Again—How It Will Be Worked.

The Detwiler flouring mill, located on the canal, in the Fifth ward, which has been standing idle for a number of years, is under operation again.

The establishment is owned by the Detwiler Brothers, who have expended about $4,000 improving the plant.

The mill will be operated on the old-fashioned plan. New burrs have been put in, and the milling will be done by this system.

The owners intend to give the public the same service as the mills of old did. Each patron's grist is ground separate, and he receives flour from his own wheat with the proper amount deducted for toll.

A. H. Detwiler will manage the mill.

CAPT. T. F. SHIPHERD.

One of the Men You Meet in the Marsh.

No man in Toledo better loves a day in the marsh than the subject of this brief sketch—Capt. T. F. Shipherd. He finds time to leave his labors long enough to study the beauties of nature. Many is the good story "Cap" can tell of exciting times with the rod and gun, and, then, he always has the evidence with him, for he brings back game when he goes shooting.

He is a true sport, shoots birds in season, and his good aim has caused many a younger man to envy him. "Cap" is one of the many men in the Seventh ward whom it is a pleasure to meet, and to put in one day with him and his dog "Bob" is to learn a whole lot about the mysteries of shooting and fishing.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

When You See It in the Bee It's So.

To the Editor: I noticed in last evening's Bee some criticisms on A. N.'s article in regard to the vote of the Political Equality club on the subject of whipping in our public schools. I wish only to say that my information was obtained from the Woman's Recorder, the editor of which is a member of said club, and I supposed it was good authority. I also saw the same statement in the Commercial, Blade, News, and Sunday Journal. I must acknowledge that I did make a mistake in not obtaining my information from the Bee. I find that when the Bee makes a statement that it is usually correct. A. N.

HANGING A SPY.

"Halt! Who goes there?"

It is 11 o'clock on a winter's night, and a cavalryman on picket hears a suspicious sound in the leafless bushes on his right. He has hardly spoken when the echo comes back to him from the post below: "Halt! Who goes there?"

The figure of a man suddenly rises above the low bushes. A quick dash to the south might save him, but he hesitates, and it is too late. He is in Federal uniform. He has passed the camp sentinels—he is skulking through the woods—he has planned to desert to the enemy. Five minutes after his capture he is at the reserve and ten minutes later he is on his way back to camp. And why should he seek to desert his flag—to cover his memory for all time with a stain worse than that of murder? He is growing in years, but evidently a veteran in war. They question him, hoping he may exculpate himself, but he refuses to answer. He is left in the care of the provost guard and it is not until daylight comes again that other questions are put to him. He maintains silence. Then they charge him with being a spy. His face pales at the word, but he has nothing to say. He refuses to give his name or name his command. He is still obstinate when taken to headquarters. He is pale and anxious, but refuses to open his lips. Later on, when put on trial for his life before a court-martial, he still pursued the policy he had evidently decided on from the first. As a would-be deserter he might bring forward excuses—have some sort of defense. The verdict might be imprisonment, but it would not be death. As a spy he will surely suffer the fate of spies. Then why not speak—name his captain—identify himself and ask the court to be merciful.

Never a word from him throughout the trial. Every captain in the division was called on to identify him, but none could place him. The charge had to be that of spying, and the verdict had to be death. In the field, convicted by drumhead court martial, he would have been shot within a few hours. Here in winter quarters there was plenty of time to prepare a gallows. When informed of the verdict he caught his breath like one seized with sudden pain, and there was a twitching of the muscles around the mouth. Thirty seconds later he had regained control of himself.

It was a week before he was led out to die. After the findings of court martial had been returned "aproved" they gave him two days to prepare himself for eternity. The mockery of it was cruel. Men who know that their hours on earth are numbered cannot absolve their souls of sin. The spy felt that it was mockery and he waved the chaplains away.

All hangings under military law are at sunrise. A company had been detailed to see the order carried out; a sergeant's guard to act as escort. It was a clear, frosty morning, and daylight seemed to come slowly. The condemned man was up and dressed and waiting. He was pale-faced, but there was a look of resolution in his eye which I was glad to see. He would die game. A chaplain had come in with me. The spy waved him out and turned his back, that his elbows might be bound.

He saw the gallows long before we reached it, but his face betrayed no emotion. March! march! march! Only a soldier could have marched to the beat of the muffled drum going to his death. We reach the foot of the gallows at last. The spy looks up and calmly surveys the structure and the dangling noose. He is assisted up the rude ladder to the trap. A chaplain kneels on the rough boards and offers a prayer, and then a hush falls upon the assemblage. Thank God that my orders were fully carried out when I had delivered my prisoner on the scaffold! The hangman awaits us. He is a volunteer from some guardhouse, and will be paid a few dollars in money at headquarters.

"You have a message for someone, and I will deliver it!" I whispered in the prisoner's ear, as his ankles were being tied.

"Yes, a message to Colonel —— of the ——th —— infantry. He will tell my friends. Get word to him that I died in the line of duty. Thank you—good-by!"

From the hour of his capture to the moment of his death these were the only words he uttered. He had scarcely spoken them when the hangman pulled the black cap over his face, stepped back to the lever, and two seconds later the trap fell with a crash and the body was dangling in the air. It was only after peace came that I could deliver the message.

"Ah, poor Dick!" sighed the colonel when I had finished. "Hung for a spy and yet he was not a spy. He entered your lines to try to find a brother of his who had deserted and bring him back to duty—that and nothing more. The brother came back to us—poor Dick died on the gallows!"

FEET TOO SMALL.

Many Women Perfectly Formed Except As to Their Feet.

Louis Xavier, a Parisian sculptor, now making a tour of America, sat in the corridor of the Southern yesterday and discussed the human form divine, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"It is not true, as the world generally supposes, that ideal statues are composites. Yes, I have read that sculptors use a number of models for one statue, copying the head of one, the bust of another, the limbs of a third and so on. Some sculptors may resort to such ridiculous patchwork, but I imagine the effect would be far more pleasing.

"Perfectly formed women are by no means so rare as generally supposed. Not one woman in a dozen has been seriously deformed by tight lacing and the high shoes that formerly played such havoc with shapely limbs, have gone out of fashion. But a perfectly formed female foot is now a rare avis. The world appears to have adopted the Chinese idea that the smaller the foot the prettier it is, and the result is that perfectly modeled feet are cramped and abused until not a line of beauty is left. Now any sculptor, any artist, will tell you that a foot too small to harmonize with the figure is an actual deformity. I would rather see the foot too large, if it be shapely, than too small. Think of a Juno who stands five feet seven inches and tips the scales at 150 pounds teetering to and fro on No. 1 or 2 feet. She would wear a No. 4 at the very least, and a No. 6 would not be out of proportion.

"Like the foot, the hand should harmonize with the body. A little string of a hand on a lusty Minerva, who towers up nearly six feet tall, is shocking to true artistic taste. Did you ever see a man whose nose was too small for his face? Well, it is just as necessary that the hand and foot should be in harmony with the figure as the nose should fit the face. Some day people will learn this, and then as many people will wear padded shoes as now limp along on footgear a size too small. Madame will then be as much ashamed of a hand too small as she now is of one too large.

There's a regular craze for Poole Overcoats.

Seems though every gentleman in Toledo who has hitherto patronized the "stylish" tailor has been in our Clothing Shop looking at them. They're the reigning sensation of the trade.

It's a new overcoat shape. It's from London, where all gentlemen's fashions originate. It's a copy of a coat made by the famous Poole, tailor to the Prince of Wales. You see it in picture today—the long, generous sack shape, from smooth Kersey or the celebrated English Carr Melton.

It's true form and will do you true and laudable service. We are proud of this coat. You'll be proud too when you shall own it. The price, $25. Your tailor will ask you twice $25.

MOCKETT & CLOTHIER

HOW DID IT HAPPEN?

Come, Listen to the Burden of a Democratic Song,

In Fact, As Well As Fiction Right Triumphs Over Wrong.

The People of Toledo Join the Jubilee and Sing the Praises of Democracy With the Same Old Fashioned Ring.

The great democratic victory is the only topic of conversation on the streets. Joy is written on the faces of the democrats, and surprise on those of their friends—the enemy. The republicans can't realize it yet. They could have suffered an ordinary defeat, but to be snowed under in such an avalanche necessitates a good deal of digging out before they can get back to earth again.

On the streets, in offices—in fact, everywhere—is nothing but politics, politics. The poor down-trodden democrats who have bravely and good-naturedly suffered defeat on so many occasions are having their turn at jibing the republicans.

Wiggling about through the knots of interested citizens, the Bees gathered the following bits of opinions as to how it was done:

Frank I. King—"The party in power is always at a great disadvantage, and the result shows that no president should ever be renominted for a second consecutive term. The large foreign element recently naturalized in New York city and Chicago caused the result there aided by local issues in Illinois. Wheat is selling 30 cents lower than four years ago and the farmers did not stop to think what caused it, but wanted a change. The democrats had as much money as the republicans and worked in perfect harmony; they used the Homestead strike to good effect and had a great advantage in their managers. If Harrison had listened more to practical politicians like Clarkson and Quay, he would have fared better; but the tide was plainly with the democrats this season."

Tom O'Neill—"It's too grand to offer an opinion."

Gen. J. W. Green—"I ain't saying a word."

Sherman W. Lott—"We have too many cranks in the republican party."

John Bolan—"Tammany did it. Well, I should say so."

Rudolph Brand—"The people revolted against excessive taxation."

Morgan Sheehy—"I felt it coming. New York is all right."

M. M. Eppstein—"Harrity deserves the greatest credit."

Jerry O'Brien—"Dave Hill did it, and dont you forget it.

Charlie Hanner—"Oh, give us time to think it out."

Bob Wallace—"I knew the landslide was coming and bet accordingly."

James McGuire—Democrats did their duty.

Frank J. Cheney—"It was the natural result of a condition of things which had simply become unbearable."

B. F. Wade—"Tariff reform was the winning card, and Grover Cleveland was trump."

Charlie Murphy—"Credit it up to Tammany and Harrity."

S. A. Court—"I didn't I tell you so after I got back from New York?"

F. N. Quale—"Mr. Maher's prediction relative to Quale soup didn't materialize, did it?"

Charlie Stager—"New York is still the Empire state, and Grover Cleveland is the best card out."

Jim Southard—"I don't know nothing."

James Halpin—'Twas made to order.

Jim Ashley, jr.—"When I return to New York I'll investigate and let you know."

M. C. Sullivan—"It don't matter. I only know that Byron Ritchie is elected. Shake."

Fred Eversman—Popular upheaval against bossism.

Chairman Commager—"It was a general uprising and must be credited to the good sense of the people."

D. B. Smith—"It was caused by the people's endorsement of democratic doctrines."

F. O. Paddock—"Due to the tariff. In Illinois the school question defeated the republicans."

W. H. Morehouse—"The people did it. You can blind the farmer with sophistry for a time, but when he sells wheat at 50 cents and find a tax on clothing, on everything, he rebels. That's the secret."

Hank Hale—Had to be so.

Thomas A. Taylor—"It was due to the McKinley legislation principally."

Will Robinson—"That's what everybody wants to know."

Charley Read—"The republicans fell down."

Capt. Dustin—"The republicans didn't get votes enough. Ha! ha!"

Ed Goldsmith—"The boys wouldn't let the boys blow horns and create enthusiasm."

F. L. Newberg—"There's fraud somewhere."

John C. Phelan—"The people voted the democratic ticket."

Dr. Muna—"Because of an overplus of democratic votes."

W. W. Bellman—"The McKinley bill and pension frauds did it."

F. B. Dodge—"Don't understand it at all."

M. I. Wilcox—"The people were crazed. There was no cause for such a landslide."

Dr. Lawless—The people spoke.

E. W. Tolerton—"The people, enlightened by a campaign of education, did it."

S. C. Schenck—"The workingman thought he wasn't getting his share of protection and so revolted."

W. S. Brown—"Because the republicans did not have enough republican votes."

John Barstable—"Because the laboring element was dissatisfied."

Charley Gates—"Because the republicans made it unanimous."

Ed W. Brown—"The district went democratic because Ashley ran for congress. I haven't traveled much, so can't tell you about the country at large."

Dan O'Hara—Vox Populi, etc.

J. T. Dempsey ws found in the Union Savings bank writing sarcastic postals to his republican friends who rubbed it into him four years ago. He paused in his delightful work long enough to exclaim, "Why? Because we are the people."

Postmaster Brown—"I ain't saying a word, am I?"

H. S. Walbridge—"I don't know. It's a terrible landslide, is it not?"

Leading Republican—"The Blade and Baumbach defeated Ashley."

Jacob Mandler—"Grover Cleveland's personal popularity won the day."

Sheriff O'Neill, of Lima—"The victory is so stupendous that we can hardly realize it yet."

Tom Cogan, Cincinnati (Dispatch to John Bolan)—"Are we in it? Well. Have one on me."

W. J. Colburn—"It was a triumph of right over wrong, of justice and truth over boodle and bossism."

J. Cooper Price—"God only knows, I don't."

M. B. Daly—"New York and Tammany are the victors and backed Cleveland strongly."

Capt. T. F. Shipherd—Excuse me.

C. C. Hirssig—Byron was a favorite.

Ed Unbehaun—Ashley wasn't wanted.

F. C. Smith—Ritchie was the people's candidate.

Louis Young—It was due.

M. J. Sullivan—The young men did it.

Frank Wernert—Must have been right.

Charles Quinlan—Couldn't be otherwise.

Neg Cochran—Boodle did not prevail.

Parks Hone—It was so stipulated in the bond.

Frank Hirssig—He bid fourteen without the ace or deuce.

"Happy Cal" Wagner—Byron carried too many guns.

J. M. Hall—"There is always a period in a man's life when he sees the error of his ways. The people of this country have reached that point."

J. E. Gueckel—"I can't give a reason just now. If I didn't have this cold I might be able to enlighten you, but just now I can't understand it at all."

Robt. B. Dakin—"Am too surprised to give a reason. Am not awake yet. I vote the republican ticket, but I am satisfied that Cleveland is a level-headed man that he will run things all right."

J. B. Battelle—"It was due to republican apathy largely."

Parks Hone—"It means that the young men have become tired of the harping on this sickly sentiment of the war. It means that their eyes are fully opened to the situation and they believe in democracy."

Judge F. M. Sala—"Grover got the most votes that's all. Why do you ask us republicans such heartrending questions?"

R. S. Holbrook—"The people wanted a change and they got it."

H. H. Cushing—"I'll give it up; nobody in the country knows."

C. J. Wooley—"It is a verdict against a high tariff."

OH, MAMMA!!

Ye Gods, Would You Look at the Gall of It.

How the Blade Took It Upon Itself to Elect Mr. Ashley and What It Had the Cheek to Say About It All.

Now that Byron Ritchie has been elected, according to the official figures, the article in yesterday's Blade telling how Ashley was going to Washington is all the more laughable. It savored highly of the story describing the launching of "the elegant new steel steamer J. W. Moore, etc."

The Blade went on to say:

"It remained for democratic Ottawa county to elect the republican candidate. Cleveland's plurality in that county is 1,395, but Gov. Ashley forged ahead of his ticket, and is saved. To-day when a democratic lounger expresses a doubt as to Ashley's election he is at once challenged to bet from $100 to $500, and then he collapses. Ritchie died hard, and last night went to Ottawa county, only to find out that official figures do not lie. It is bitter medicine, but Ritchie and his friends must swallow it."

Must they, though? Not to-day, kind friends. 'Tis a joyous thing to be victorious, but when one observes such egotism as is displayed in the self-commending article above quoted, it is a joy forever to see the vain turkey cock swung around by the neck and slapped up against the fence post—ker-chuck.

Says the Blade, continuing:

"The Ninth district is to be congratulated on Gov. Ashley's success. It insures a man of brains and of influence as the district's representative. Toledo's interests will be carefully watched, and the district will assume prominence on account of its distinguished member."

Oh, Mamma! mamma! mamma!

"Ritchie made a phenomenal run," continues the article.

Right you are, partner.

Continuing again:

"The suspense is ended. There will be no more fluctuation of votes. The six majority has come to stay. It is Hon. James M. Ashley, congressman from the Ninth Ohio district. The election of Mr. Ashley is all the more gratifying because it places in the republican column a district which, since Tuesday night, has been doubtful or counted for the enemy."

The election of Mr. Ashley! Listen to that. Oh, my! oh, my! Why didn't the Blade elect Harrison too, while it was in the business? Twaddle is cheap.

BI-METALISM.

London, Nov. 11.—Replying to a number of correspondents who asked his opinion of the fall in the amount of British exports, Mr. Arthur J. Balfour, formerly first lord of the treasury, has written a letter in which he says that one of the most practical remedies will be to reform the currency in the direction of bi-metalism.

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the liberal unionist leader, in writing on the same subject, points out that the condition of trade is as bad in protected countries as in England from which he reasons that the causes are not connected with tariffs.

CHANGE OF LOCATION.

New York, Nov. 11.—Considerable gossip has been occasioned on Governors Island by the rumor that Gn. O. O. Howard would be replaced in command of the department of the Atlantic by Gen. Miles, whose headquarters are now in Chicago.

None of the officers could say how or where the rumor started, but the majority of them were inclined to think it true. General Howard is now in Europe and will not return home for two months. He is collecting data for a work on harbor defense.

WINDGALL WON.

London, Nov. 11.—The race for the Liverpool cup to-day was won by Mr. Phillips, formerly Baron Hirsch's 3-year-old bay colt Windgall, by Gilliard, out of Windsor. Ermak was second and Lady Roseberry third. Windgall's victory was not a surprise, but it had been generally expected that Lady Roseberry would be second in the race. The race was over the cup course, one mile and three furlongs.

MAVERICK BANK.

Boston, Nov. 11.—Judge Putnam of the United States circuit court has ordered a rehearing on the indictment of Asa P. Potter, ex-president of the Maverick National bank. The indictment charges Potter with making false entries in a report to the comptroller of the currency and also with making false entries on the books.

The report was attested by Potter as director and not as president.

SOLDIERS ON A TOOT.

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 11.—Last night Wm. Teknor and Wm. Wheeler, members of a Canadian regiment of infantry stationed here, were acting in a disorderly manner on the street. When remonstrated with by Constable Campbell they attacked him and were beating him when Campbell drew his revolver and shot Teknor in the breast, inflicting a wound which caused death soon after. Teknor was an Englishman lately from London and has no relatives in America.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever see anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced. It seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

COULD NOT LAND.

A New York Schooner Gets Into Trouble.

New York, Nov. 11.—The schooner Anna R. Bishop, Capt. Rulon, which left New York September 15 lumber laden, and bound to Para, Brazil, returned this morning. Capt. Rulon says he arrived at Para October 12 and was signalled not to enter the harbor. He anchored near Atelia lighthouse and waited five days.

No attention was paid to his signals. He then concluded to sail up the river but was met by a Brazilian man-of-war and ordered to return to New York.

No opportunity was given to speak to any person, nor was he allowed to approach any nearer than to be able to distinguish signals. No boat or vessel was permitted to go to the leeward of the schooner, because she came from New York, where cholera was supposed to exist. The captain proceeded with his vessel to this port. He had on board a clean bill of health from the Brazilian consul at New York, which he was unable to present.

THE CANVASS.

Law Relating to the Scrutiny of Votes.

The canvass of votes and returns as provided by the act of April 13, 1892, enlarging the duties of boards of elections, is thus conducted:

The members of the board of elections shall constitute the county canvassing board, and all duties as to canvassing the votes and making returns of the same, now by law assigned to the clerk of the court of common pleas, shall be performed by such board. Within four days after election in November, and after any special election for county or state officers, or for representation in congress, the members shall meet at the office of the board of elections and organize by choosing one of their number to be president, and appointing a secretary and necessary assistants. They shall proceed to canvass the vote of the county and make return of the same as required by section 2926a, and by law.

In case of doubt or disagreement, so that the board can not proceed with the canvass, a statement, in writing, of the matter in doubt or controversy, shall be made and forthwith submitted to one of the judges of the circuit, for the circuit in which the county is situated, and if the board can not otherwise agree the judge shall be selected by lot. Such judge shall summarily decide upon the matters submitted to him, and his decision shall be final.

Section 2926a, referred to, reads:

The county board of canvassers, on demand of any candidate, shall compare the returns as received by the clerk from the precincts in any city of the first or second grades in the first class, with the certified statement sent by the judges of election to the city board of elections as herein required, and if found to disagree, the number certified in the statement last mentioned shall be taken as correct and counted, unless proof of the returns received by the clerk, satisfactory to the board of canvassers, shall be made by (the) judges, clerks and witnesses of the counting, and for the purpose of adjusting such discrepancy, and determining the true result of the election, the board of canvassers shall also summon witnesses and examine them under oath, as to the proceedings and proclamations at such election in any precinct, and may also view and consider, as part of the record, the poll-books, registers, and duplicate lists made therefrom, and deposited as herein provided; but such inquiry shall be limited exclusively to determining which shall be accepted, namely, the returns as received by the clerk, or the certified statement as received by the board of elections, as proof of the true vote at the close of the polls in any precinct.

CITY COMMITTEES.

General Feeling of the Democratic Daddies.

Enlargment of Forest Cemetery—Obstruction of Streets—The House Moving Ordinance Improvements.

The councilmen were called to meet in adjourned session last night to take up the ordinances left over at the regular meeting on Monday night, and to transact other business. It was also the regular night for sessions of the committees on streets, sidewalks and sewers.

At 7:30 there were very few of the councilmen present, and they and the lobbyists on hand were talking about the late election.

The city solicitor came in and was asked by a republican friend what he had to say. He answered by relating a story in point. He said: "When I was a young fellow in the town in which I lived, I was walking down a hill. The street was very slippery. Just ahead of me was a young lady—a belle of the town. All at once her feet went from under her and she came down with a rush. She looked around and saw that a good many people had seen her fall and were laughing. I stepped up as a young man should, helped her up and asked what was the matter. she said: 'I'm too big to cry; too badly hurt to talk much, and too religious to swear.' That's my fix."

Signatures were obtained to a bond for $300 to be filed in the probate court for the institution of proceedings against Street Commissioner Bower.

Enlarging the Cemetery.

There was a call for the cemetery committee, and City Solicitor Read remarked that this should be the first committee to meet after the election. He then explained that he had been requested by the cemetery trustees to call attention to a certain matter. The trustees had deemed it necessary to enlarge Forest cemetery, and agreed to purchase three acres for $2,500, from Dr. Bissell, of New York. They thought at first that they had the power within themselves to purchase property, but discovered that the statute provided that when they added to the cemetery grounds they must present the matter to the council and obtain their consent.

Mr. Graham asked if the trustees had the money in their own fund and was answered in the affirmative. A motion to grant the privilege asked was then made, seconded and carried, and the solicitor was instructed to propose a resolution for presentation to the council.

Care of the Streets.

"Streets!" was the next call, and as soon as the committee got together Mr. Osborne stated that the people on Huron street were kicking against the sidewalk being blocked up in front of the new National Union block. They wanted a temporary sidewalk, or some arrangement so that they could pass. The contractor had told some of them nothing more would be done to the building this winter.

Mr. Hodge stated that the same difficulty existed at the corner of Jefferson and Water streets.

The solicitor being appealed to said it was doubtful if the council could compel the putting in of a walk without an action in court. Permission was given to encumber only one-third of the street, and then only as necessary for building. It was the duty of the council to keep the streets open and free from nuisance.

A number of the committe remarked that the contractors for the building at the corner of Jefferson and Summit streets had fenced off part of the street and kept it clean, to be used as a sidewalk.

The solicitor stated that if any one ran into that fence the city would be liable for damages.

The member asked if it would be any more liable than for damage done by material in the street, and the solicitor acknowledged that it would not.

Resolutions were passed requiring the street commissioner to see the proper parties and ask them to put down temporary walks at both places mentioned.

Resolutions to pave Jefferson street from Eleventh street to Collingwood avenue, and Dorr street from City Park avenue (Lenk street) to the city line, were tabled.

The ordinance to amend sections 473 and 476 of the codified ordinances as amended on August 27, 1888. It relates to the licensing of house movers, was presented, and requiring approval of the council.

Mr. Osborn asked if $10 was the extent of the penalty, and the deputy clerk explained that the $10 referred only to removal without obtaining the license. He suggested that section 658, which makes it unlawful to cut or injure any ornamental tree, be included in the new ordinance. The claim had been made, in the case now in court, that the permit implied the right to cut anything in the way.

This drew forth several individual protests against the vandalism done lately by the moving of a house that was not worth half of one limb cut. Such terms as "unmitigated outrage" were freely used.

An addition was made to include the provisions relating to streets, sidewalks and public ways, and the ordinance approved as thus amended.

A petition to vacate an alley on block 66, between Erie and Grand avenue and from Monroe to Detroit avenue was referred to Messers. Hodge, Rutherford and Osborn to investigate.

The solicitor asked concerning a resolution to vacate part of Woodruff avenue referred by the board of aldermen, stating that it could not be vacated without petition, advertisement for six weeks and ordinance. He was informed that the resolution had been pronounced n. g., and destroyed.

The city engineer presented a new resolution for the improvement of State street, from Canton avenue to Union street; a new ordinance for that improvement and a new ordinance to establish the grade of Warren street from Bancroft street to Delaware avenue.

It was 8:45 when the president rapped for order. The following answered to their names: Messrs. Hake, Lee, Manchester, Miller, Morris, Osborn, Rutherford, Schmidt, Taylor, Walker and President Coleman. The president stated that there were not enough present to pass the ordinances, and on motion of Mr. Miller the council adjourned.

A COMMON SENSE REMEDY.

In the matter of curatives what you want is something that will do its work while you continue to do yours—a remedy that will give you no inconvenience nor interfere with your business. Such a remedy is Allcock's Porous Plasters. These plasters are not an experiment; they have been in use for over thirty years, and their value has been attested by the highest medical authorities, as well as by testimonials from those who have used them. They require no change of diet and are not affected by wet or cold. Their action does not interfere with labor or business; you can toil and yet be cured while hard at work. They are so pure that the youngest, the oldest, the most delicate person of either sex can use them with great benefit.

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentations. Ask for Allcock's, and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.

IRON ORE.

The First Train From the Mesaba Range Reaches the Docks.

The Superior, Wis., Leader has the following with relation to an important enterprise in which several Toledoans are interested:

Within a few miles of Superior and nearer to Allouez bay than to any port on Lake Superior is the greatest iron ore field known in the world. Yesterday what may be fairly considered as the most important event in the commercial development of Superior occurred, when that great field was tapped and a train load of its product was delivered on the ore pockets in Allouez bay.

The ore was weighed by Mr. Dole car by car, the average being about twenty-two tons apiece.

With an unusual amount of snorting, whistling and bellowing the train was then pushed upon the high dock and out over Allouez bay. Car No. 351, which formed the front of the train, was stopped over pocket No. 23 and dumped.

When the train reached the summit of the dock General Manager Fisher and General Manager Clarke clasped hands and congratulated each other in a loud voice with an extraordinary amount of hand shaking and beaming smiles. The pair then climbed upon the ore car with many a slip and a grunt and with a heavy iron wrench nearly eight feet in length turned the iron post that holds the trap and dumped the ore into pocket No. 23.

The ore is so soft and fine that it was packed into the cars firmly and therefore was not very easily discharged. The party, some of whom had never been on the dock before and who seemed to feel rather scary at the high gale that was blowing, then made an examination of the ore pockets and their machinery. The pockets are of such a size that each one comes exactly under a car in a coupled train, so that the entire train can practically be dumped at once.

Each pocket will hold about 200 tons, or 10 cars of ore. It is built of big pine timbers, lined with three-inch seasoned maple planks, and bolted and bound with steel. The mouth is of heavy iron plate, and the chutes, which will conduct the ore down to the vessel, are of steel, 30 or 40 feet in length and handled by steel cables attached to Union hoist machinery.

The main dock, on reaching the summit of the dock, spreads out into two tracks, so that two trains, side by side, may be unloaded at once.

Forty-two pockets are complete, or enough to hold four ship-loads of ore. The miners have promised at least 20 cars a day from now on, so that the first cargo of iron out of the head of the lake may sail for Cleveland next Saturday. Capt. McDougall has promised a whale-back for the first cargo—very appropriate. Superior ore in a Superior ship built by Superior men.

Having examined into these matters and unlocked all the dumps, the party started for the Euclid hotel, where Manager Clarke had ordered what in Duluth would be called a banquet. Before leaving the dock, however, they took notice that the first cars were numbered 351, 350, 378, 331, 328, 330, 339, 349 and 329. These cars were made at West Duluth—wheels, air brakes, beams, frames and all—and are leased to the Misaba & Northern.

At the Euclid hotel the party was enlarged by Engineer Banks of the Terminal company and Wm. Listman of the Listman Milling company.

The leading spirits were probably as well satisfied with the occasion and with each other as any who ever gathered at the banquet board. The poorest drink on the table was Mum's extra dry.

As the meal progressed the entire history of conceiving and building the Duluth & Winnipeg, the Mesaba & Northern, the Superior Belt Line & Terminal railroads and the St. Louis bridge and also opening up the great mines of the Mesaba range was gone over.

General Manager Clarke acted as toast master. The first toast was to James Bardon, who way back in 1878 helped to organize and survey and secure a land grant for the Duluth & Winnipeg railroad, named and projected exactly as it now exists. The next was to General Manager Fisher, who had the wisdom and foresight to see that the place of all places for ore docks and pockets at the head of Lake Superior were where they now are, on Allouez bay. Mr. Fisher later received a second toast in honor of the tact and stamina which enabled him to successfully fight the opposition at Duluth and elsewhere, but which is now all turned to praise.

Very hearty toasts were also drunk to Foley, Grant & Guthrie, who had the nerve to put large sums of money into the Duluth & Winnipeg and other railroad schemes which are now a success. Following were toasts to the engineers: "To Frank A. Flower for securing, in spite of persistent opposition in West Superior and Duluth, the St. Louis bridge charter;" to Williams, Upham & Dougherty, to Wm. Listman and his fellow millers and finally to Francis B. Clarke, "the greatest and most successful hustler at the head of the lake."

At 4 o'clock the party dispersed satisfied that they had celebrated in fitting style one of the greatest days in the history of Superior.

"There is no end of ore on the Mesaba range," said General Manager Fisher. "The Mountain iron, from which we brought the ore to-day, is a marvel, unparalleled, so far as I know, in the world. It can be stripped in a few days so that a steam shovel can work on a range three-quarters of a mile in length and at least a half mile in width and of unknown depth—all clean, soft ore, workable by a steam shovel without a bit of hoisting or the interference of a drop of water. There is nothing like this in the world, so you see no man can tell how much ore we shall ship over the line.

"The Cranberry Lumber company is now sending lumber and timber as rapidly as possible for our extension. We shall build 2,000 feet, all pockets and dumps, on the end of the present dock during the coming winter. This will give us enormous facilities.

"You see two dredges at work out there in the bay now. They are making another channel so that boats can come in and go out at once on both sides of the pockets. It is the ideal place for ore handling. To be frank, I am rather proud of the choice I made; proud of the decision opposed by a good many adverse interests to locate this, the first ore dock at the head of Lake Superior, on Allouez bay, where you now see it.

"To-morrow there will be another train load of ore in, and after that until navigation closes from 20 to 40 cars per day."

"The first cargo goes, I am told, to Cleveland, and we have been promised that it shall sail in one of Capt. McDougall's whalebacks. It seems to me that this is all the honor Superior could reasonably expect in this line—at one time."

HAVE MERCY ON THE BABY.

Out of Regard for His Spinal Column Choose His Nurse With Care.

Mothers would be justly indignant if accused of any lack of care for their little ones. Yet how many of them watch and choose carefully the nurse to whom they intrust their darlings? To illustrate the culpable carelessness of some nurses may be given the following true story told in the New York Tribune by the wife of an eminent physician. "I have no doubt," she said in the course of conversation, "that many of the distressing chronic troubles of the spine and its more obscure ramifications and manifestations might, if parents but knew it, be directly traced to some act of wanton thoughtlessness on the part of the nursery maid. It is quite dreadful to think of such a delicate little piece of mechanism being given over to the care of an ignorant, indifferent person. The least sudden jar, if the weight of the body is resting at all on the spine, might be exceedingly injurious, and for that reason I would enact a law, if I had my way, to abolish baby carriages for infants under a year old at least. If your nurse is too lazy or weak to carry her nursling get another woman, but do not expose your helpless little one to the jarring movements of even the best springs in lifting the carriage across a curb, etc. Besides, the actual heat of the human body is a great protection against cold, and no amount of eider down or woolen will take the place of the protecting warmth of a kindly bosom and strong, tender arms.

"I will tell you what I actually saw once," she continued after a moment's hesitation. "The story is so painful that I hardly like to tell it, but it may do good in showing young mothers the actual dangers to which their babies are exposed. I was walking in ——street one afternoon, when a nurse who was evidently belated, passed me with a baby wagon at a very quick pace, the little carriage with its sleeping baby swaying up and down on its easy springs with the rapid motion. 'Oh, do take care!' I exclaimed, as she passed me with a sudden swerve of the little vehicle; 'you will hurt the child.' The girl gave an impertinent toss of the head and muttered something that I did not catch, turning at the same time into the basement area of a large, fine house, and without checking her career she bumped the carriage down the three or four steps that led to the inclosure. 'I will do as I would like to be done by,' I said to myself on watching the performance, 'although it is small thanks that I will get, I dare say.' So I ran up the steps, rang the bell, and told the butler that I wished to see the lady of the house. Luckily I found favor in his sight, for without remonstrance he showed me into a little side library, and a second after a pretty young woman walked in with an inquiring expression on her pleasant face. 'but I feel it my duty to tell you that your maid will do your child serious injury if she jolts down the steps in the manner I have just noticed,' and I was proceeding to give her a little information about the delicate structure of the head, neck and spine of young infants when her manner forze me at once. 'Thank you,' she said haughtily, 'but I think I can trust to the experience of my nurse.' As she spoke there came the sound of a rush of rapid footsteps in the hall and a maid burst in upon us. 'Mrs. A——, come quick!' she panted, 'the baby has a fit!' In an instant the mother was out of the room and running down the basement stairs; while I, feeling that I could be of no use, left the house, pitying the poor young thing too much to blame her. The next day I passed by and noticed with a start of horror the fatal insignia of mourning on the door—the baby was dead. Did the doctors know, I wondered, that it had been murdered!"

WHY SHOULDN'T HE BLOW?

The Porpoise, Whose Skin Is Valuable for Various Important Uses.

Leather dealers down in the swamp say that if the people who catch porpoises off the coast of Hatteras could put the raw skins on the market at cheaper rates the world would have better shoes, says the New York Sun. As the case now stands porpoise leather fetches nearly twice as much as any other leather in use for shoemaking.

Its wholesale price is from $1 to $1.50 more than that of French calf. It is higher than cordovan, the trade name for horse leather, and much costlier than kangaroo leather or alligator skin. Porpoise hide has been on the leather market for a good many years, and long before it began to figure in the swamp it was made up into various articles of wear by fishermen on the coast.

Porpoise hide boots were in high repute on the Maryland coast 100 years ago. The porpoise is caught in considerable numbers all along the coast from New York to Florida, and is sometimes seen in the upper part of this harbor. Old fishermen have a semi-comic attitude toward the porpoise and have a curious superstition touching its appearance on the coast.

Small schools of porpoises are seen from the coast below New York bay moving north or south, a few miles at sea, and leaping one after another into the air. The fishermen who catch them follow up schools of small fish upon which the porpoise feed.

A full-grown porpoise yields a skin from five to six and one-half feet long and from two feet to 30 inches wide. The process of curing and tanning has been expedited within a few years so that the skins are much more promptly brought to market than they once were.

Wholesalers sell the skins either in "sides," two to a hide, or cut into vamps for shoes. All old fishermen believe that the porpoise skin is waterproof, and the belief has gradually crept into the popular mind, though it is a matter of doubt whether the skin will long resist water.

It does, however, make the best possible hunting boots, since it is very pliant, is perhaps the strongest leather made, and is not easily penetrated by moisture under ordinary conditions.

Thus far the demand for porpoise leather has come from the custom shoemakers. It has never made its way to the shoe factories as kangaroo leather has, and people down in the swamp say that porpoise leather can never be in great demand until it shall have reached the factories.

On the other hand, the fact that the skins are small, and the cost of catching the porpoise is considerable, makes it difficult for the manufacturer of shoes to introduce it.

Many custom shoemakers use it for expensive shoes, and it is to some extent in use for machinery belting, when the belts are not very large. It is also used in some parts of the phonograph.

The porpoise shoe laces are made from the scraps of the leather, and it is especially adapted to such uses, because of its extreme toughness and elasticity.

THE GIANT'S CAUSEWAY.

The Giant's Causeway is situated at the northern extremity of County Antrim, a short distance from Post Rush, Ireland. It consists of countless hosts of basaltic pillars, varying in shape from a pentagon to an octagon, the average length of each column or pillar being about 80 feet, the whole stacked so closely together that a knife blade could hardly be inserted between them. But the formation of these pillars is not the least wonderful part about them, for, although they may be counted by thousands and tens of thousands, each column is fashioned with a symmetry that suggests a mason's handiwork. Their composition is a perfect fusion of one-half flinty earth, one-quarter lime and clay, and one-quarter almost pure iron, each pillar being divided into regular lengths or joints which come together as a perfect, natural ball-and-socket union.

Although to be found in small detachments (embedded in the cliffs, sands, etc.) for some distance along the shore, the principal aggregation forming the causeway proper consists of three projections or tongues known as Little, Middle and Grand causeways. These singular columns are of different lengths, as has already been hinted, and present an astonishing appearance as they stand, an army of at least 40,000 strong, marshaled on the shores of Erin as if ever ready to do battle with the rising tide. One portion of this marvellous natural freak is known as "Lord Antrim's Parlor," other sections by such names as "The Giant's Chimney," "The Giant's Head," "The Nursing Child," "Hen and Chickens," "The Priest and His Flock," besides many other mysterious combinations which are at once fantastic, weird and descriptive. One of the most interesting features of the causeway, and one which I had almost neglected to mention, is "The Giant's Organ." This huge "instrument" consists of a group of pillars of various lengths set apart on the side of the main cliff. The larger columns being in the center and the smaller ones tapering off on either side, after the fashion of organ pipes, admirably sustain the idea which the name "Giant's Organ" conveys.—St. Louis Republic.

WARNINGS IN DREAMS.

Some Strange Coincidences in the Life of a Southern Man Telling Him of the Future.

"I am a great believer in dreams," said Richard C. Mason, now a guest of the Laclede. "Call it superstition, if you please—we are prone to sneer at what we cannot comprehend. One day, in the summer of '79, I lay down on a lounge in my office and took a nap—a very unusual thing for me.

"I felt compelled to do it. I dreamed that I was called home to attend my mother, who had been taken suddenly ill. I found her dead, and in her hand a piece of paper upon which was printed, in large letters, 'I have entered the gates of the New Jerusalem.'

"I was awakened by a messenger boy, who handed me a dispatch announcing that my mother had just died of apoplexy. That might have been a coincidence, you say. Four years ago I had a brother killed in a railway collision in Massachusetts. I was at my home in St. Joseph, Mo., at the time.

"The next morning I told my wife that my brother was dead—that he had both legs crushed off in a railway accident. I had dreamed it—seen the accident as plainly as though I stood by his side. I had just reached the office when I received a dispatch announcing his death in the manner I had dreamed.

"Naturally I have taken a great interest in dreams, and I know of hundreds of cases almost as remarkable as my own. People are chary about telling their dreams because they have a horror of being called superstitious."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THREE GREAT PORTRAIT PAINTERS.

The great portrait painters of the day—Carolus-Duran, Bonnat, Ribot—are realists to the core. They are very far from being purely portrait painters, of course, and their realism shows itself with splendid distinction in other works. Few painters of the nude have anything to their credit as fine as the figure M. Carolus-Duran exhibited at the Paris exposition in 1889. Ribot's "Saint Sebastian" is one of the most powerful pictures of modern French art. Bonnat's "Christ" became at once famous. Each picture is painted with a vigor and point of realistic detail which is peculiar to our own time; painted to-day Bonnat's fine and sculptural "Fellah Woman and Child," of the Metropolitan museum, would be accented in a dozen ways in which now it is not. But is perhaps in portraiture that the eminence of these painters is most explicit. They are at the head of contemporary portraitists at all events. And their portraits are almost defiantly real, void often of arrangement, and a little artificial as the very frequently prosaic atmosphere appertaining to their sometimes very stark subjects suggests. A portrait by Bonnat blinks nothing in the subject; its aim and accomplishment are the rendering of the character in a vivid fashion—including the reproduction of cobalt cravats and creased trousers even—which would hive mightily embarrassed Van Dyck and Velasquez. Ribot is a little like Rembrandt, but he deals with fewer externals, taken in the wildest sense. Carolus-Duran, the "swell" portrait painter of the day, artificial as he may be in the quality of his mind, nevertheless seeks and attains, first of all, the sense of an even exaggerated life-likeness in his charming sitters. They are, first of all, people; the pictorial element takes care of itself, sometimes even—so overmastering is the realistic tendency—the plush of the chair, the silk of the robe, the cut of the coat, seems, to an observer who thinks of the old traditions of Titian, of Raphael, of Moroni, unduly emphasized even for realism.—From "French Art—Realistic Painting," by W. C. Brownell, in the November Scribner.

AN AUSTRALIAN RACE TRACK SCENE.

What may be termed the "middle class" of the Victoria Racing club's patrons is found in the half-crown enclosure of the "Hill." This includes a reserve of 17 acres directly above the grand stand, from which it is separated by a fence and ditch. A covered stand accommodating over eight thousand people, crowns the summit of the slope and commands a magnificent view of the course more than a hundred feet below; two brass bands play incessantly between the races for the delectation of the "Hill" patrons; bars, tea and luncheon-rooms and oyster-counters dispense refreshments in Swiss chalets. Chinese pagodas, and other picturesque buildings; coat-rooms and lavatories for men, and retiring-rooms for women, are provided, and hot water for tea-making is ready at all time without charge. The attendance upon the "Hill" is a shade more respectable than that upon the "Flat," and is composed of equally strange elements. Here is the prognosticator of results in the events of the day, selling cards for five shillings each which bear the names of the winners, and driving a roaring trade—he and his customers seeming alike untroubled by the reflection that a man of such prophetic powers could make his fortune before the day was out by keeping his knowledge to his own benefit. Here, too, are the tribe of "Hill" book-makers, a class peculiar, loud-voiced, sharp in feature and eye, and clad in the extraordinary habiliments which the artist has described in his illustration. This individual is arrayed in coat and trousers of crimson cretonne, embellished with a floral pattern in yellow, and hat of the same adorned with a white ostrich feather. Among his compeers may be seen a pair of coats and caps of cardinal-red plush; a second couple are gorgeous in swallow-tail coats of cerulean velvet, and tall hats plated with gold-leaf, presenting a splendid appearance in the sun; others are attired in garments of sateen, silk, or calico, in every eccentricity of pattern and cut that a lunatic designer could originate, or a tailor with the delirium tremens construct.—From "Racing in Australia," by Sidney Dickinson, in November Scribner.

The fumes and exhalations from the sulphur springs of Colorado can be distinguished at a distance of fully 20 miles. The peculiarly pungent smells resulting from bush and prairie fires may be perceived at a distance of 30 miles or more. The delicious perfume of the forests of Ceylon is carried by the wind 25 miles out to sea, while in foggy weather travelers 100 miles from the land have recognized their proximity to the coast of Columbia by the sweet smell brought to them on a breeze from the shore.

Kodaks for Policemen!

Life to a criminal is becoming more and more discouraging every day.

It is thought that the members of the police force will have to carry snap-shot cameras about with them some time in the near future. The scheme was thought of this summer, but it is not likely that the police commissioners will take any action in the matter until another season.

In police circles the matter has been more or less discussed recently, and Patrolman Ramsey stated to a writer for The Times that he thought it a good scheme. For a long time policemen have been placed at a great disadvantage in testifying in the police and justice courts against a prisoner because they had no corroborative evidence. Sometimes the prisoner would be discharged, and it often occurred to the arresting officer if he only had a photograph of the law-breaker as he appeared just before the arrest he would need nothing more in the shape of evidence.

The scheme, in brief, is to make a snap-shot camera the policeman's corroborating witness wherever it is possible to get a shot at the prisoner. If the police should adopt the scheme, each officer will be furnished with a small camera, made especially for police work.

The camera will be used by the day force, as at night the cameras could not be used to any great advantage, as even with a flash light it would be impossible to obtain pictures that would be at all valuable.

It is thought that an argument against the camera might be made as an officer would never have time to use it when it would be most effective. It might be thought that a policeman would always find the thing in the way when it was time to use it. However, in the case of the arrest of an escaping murderer, burglar or any other lawbreaker, the officer could forego using the camera, as it would be hard work to get the right focus on the fleeing individual, but then another policeman might happen around some convenient corner and get an effective picture if he only managed to keep cool. It is hardly expected that the camera will be used at its best when the officer is in the act of making an arrest, because he generally has his hands full at that time.

It is believed, however, that the camera will become valuable in reproducing the exact locations of buildings, doors, trees, windows, obstructions, street corners and, in fact, anything which might figure in the commission of a crime. All these pictures might be valuable at a time least expected.

The idea as to the way the cameras shall be used is that the policeman, who, of course, is to familiarize himself with all the haunts of crooks and dangerous places on his beat, will take at least three snap-shots of the most important locations. For instance, on Sunday if a policeman found a side or rear door of a thirst shop open, with a customer making his exit as he wiped the liquid joy from his whiskers, he might make a photographic note of that. If he happened to observe people hurrying to and fro with growlers, empty and full of foaming fluid, he could press the button, and subsequently present a picture to the chief which would show the exact condition of certain people when they should have been in church.

The policeman with his little kodak would also be instructed to take pictures of suspicious people whom he might find acting suspiciously, but not suspiciously enough to warrant their being locked up. The portraits of certain persons might be caught with surroundings not in the least degree desirable to the original, but very valuable for future police reference. Scenes at all compromising could be registered in the officer's camera, if for nothing else, for his own personal satisfaction, especially when the picture deals with a citizen or two who have no love for the policeman and are honored with none.

In the swell districts and on Capitol hill it might be difficult for a policeman to discover anything sufficiently important to make a picture of, but the servant girls would no doubt help things along by showing how an enterprising burglar could find his way into a mansion through a defective hole or window or something of that sort.

In the early mornings women who are found wandering about the streets alone could be photographed because they might take it into their heads to commit suicide, and the picture would come in to help identify the body if she were not known.

Mad dogs would not be snapped at, as they are usually shot with a pistol and become useless. Pickpockets would always be taken when found actively engaged in their line of business. Parents who are cruel to their children would be promptly shot at when found beating them, and the pictures immediately forwarded to Secretary Thomson of the Humane society.

The policemen would not be alone in the working of the cameras, for it is thought that the machines would be a valuable addition to sergeants and roundsmen to take a snap occasionally at officers on their posts, or rather off their posts. Generally when an officer is charged before the police commissioners with having been off post, he denies the charge, saying the roundsman was mistaken or something like that. All a roundsman or sergeant would have to do would be to catch a picture of the unfortunate policeman as he is placidly sleeping in an ash barrel, or when he is informing a pretty girl two blocks away from his beat the way to find some resort.

The police camera, if adopted, might revolutionize many things that, as they are now, would not look well in pictures.

TO-DAY.

The joy that once was mine,
When love was young;
The draughts I deemed divine,
The songs I sung—
When I but saw in sighs
Breath thrown away—
Drew from my rooming eyes
The tears, to-day.

The grief that once I knew
Long years ago;
The love that proved untrue,
The friend turned foe;
The cloud and the college—
When skies grew gray—
To my once pain-drawn lips
Bring smiles, to-day!

PIONEER SKETCHES.

A Sad Story of Western Life—A True Picture of Actual Happenings—Conclusion.

By Dr. H. Scott, Lancaster, O., No. 38.

The first rays of the morning sun were just touching the highest tops of the trees half a mile off to the right, when one train pulled out of the depot at Indianapolis, heading towards the south. The year was 1858, and the month October—October, the golden month. For myself I have to say, that October has always been to me by far the most pleasant month of the year. I love the sear and yellow leaf, the harvest home, the pallid sun and the quiet, smoky Indian summer, the farewell to summer with its sickening vapors, and the harbenger of winter.

We soon attained a lively speed. There were probably a hundred and fifty passengers in the three coaches. As we dashed on the golden forest spread away on either hand. The pale sun, the bluish atmosphere, and shimmering leaves whirling and circling in their descent to the ground, combining with the good cheer that filled our car served to make the occasion about all that mortals on earth ought reasonably to desire. We were to breakfast at 9 o'clock, and this, to those who possessed good stomachs, had no doubt much to do with the pleasantness of the hour. We entered a deep cut, the banks of which on both sides rose to the level or above the tops of the cars. Our speed was probably 25 miles to the hour. Suddenly there came a crash; then a bouncing and grating; and then the train came to a dead stand. There was some screaming—many were thrown from their seats; but when the list of casualties was made up it consisted of a few bruised noses and wrenched backs.

We all got on the outside. A wheel had left the tender; the rails were spread; the tender down on the ground; and the locomotive had jumped the track and plunged into the bank on the right. The conductor informed his passengers that they could not get away till 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when trains would meet and exchange passengers. Within ten minutes the most of the passengers were streaming along the track with their hand baggage, bound for the breakfast stand, yet over a mile ahead. I ascended the bank and saw about half a mile toward the north a house on an elevation, and partially hidden by trees. Thither I bent my steps. I informed the landlady of our mishap, and asked if she could furnish me with a breakfast. Within twenty minutes I was seated alone at a substantial farmer's breakfast. Noticing a gun on the hooks, I asked the lady if she would lend it to me; I had six hours to idle away, and I told her I was fond of shooting small game. She would do so with much pleasure. She declined the bank bill I tendered as security, as also the coin for my breakfast, and I shouldered the gun and set off. I passed round the field and turned west into the woods along a wagon road. My eyes were in the tree tops watching for a squirrel, when I suddenly emerged into an open space. There was an inclosure of some two acres containing a cabin. Everything seemed profoundly quiet—not even a dog to bark; but there was a little blue smoke coming out of the chimney, and an irresistible desire to enter came upon me.

I was admitted by a girl apparently 12 years old. The inside was twilight, but I could see that there were three or four persons seated. I took the split-bottomed chair tendered me and waited. In one corner was a bed with apparently a human being stretched out. Seated by the bedside was a female form with her face bowed on the cover; at the foot was a stout appearing lady, and a little further off a younger one. No word had been spoken. I stepped to the book shelf and took down a well-worn Bible and read on the fly leaf.

"Mary Bull, her book, given to her on her sixteenth birthday by her mother."

"Good God!" I mused; "can it be possible!" I went to the stout-appearing lady and inquired. She said the man of the house had just breathed his last. Presently the form at the side of the bed rose and walked a few times across the room. It was not the first time I had seen that tall ambling figure walk; but all doubts were removed when I caught sight of the deep scar on the right cheek. But more than 30 years intervened. Poverty was visible on every hand, though not squalor. The smell of whisky was palpable in the room, and presently a rustling in the corner beneath the ladder attracted me; a man was lying on the floor. I went to my once acquaintance and asked if she would accept aid from a stranger. She said she was in a condition to accept friendship from anybody. I told her I would return within an hour, and then walked back to my breakfast place.

The farmer had come in, and I told him what I had witnessed, and that for reasons which I would communicate to him afterwards, I had concluded to remain until after the funeral. He kindly invited me to make his house my home. He and his wife would at once go over to the cabin and take charge. I went to the train and fetched my satchel. That night my host gave a history of the family after they came to Indiana, and I communicated to him what I knew of them long before, and how I blundered on the identification.

Joshua Bar, he said, was at one time the owner of a farm, paid for, and was prosperous; but he took to drink, became embarrassed and put a mortgage on his place. Things grew worse—the mortgage was foreclosed and the place was sold, and for several years they had been shifting about—the cabin where he died was on his land. The last two years the old man had been so much of a wreck as to be unable often to leave the house. It was a blessing to the family that he was dead. His oldest son had married, and died a drunkard, and his widow and daughter were those I had seen—the stout woman, and the girl who admitted me. The youngest boy was at home, a drunkard (the one I saw under the ladder). The single daughter had taught school a couple of years; but her father drank up her money when he could get hold of it, and she had become so discouraged she gave it up. There were two married daughters and one son living west; he did not know how they were doing.

He said he would see to it now that the young lady should have a good school; and the neighbors would do what they could to help the female part of the family, if the young man would only leave the neighborhood and keep away. Everything possible had been done to reclaim him. He had made many pledges, but broke them all. He was a young man of some promise if he would keep away from whisky; but he had lost all confidence in himself. He believed he was doomed to a drunkard's grave.

The funeral was largely attended; the people came in wagons and buggies, on horseback and on foot. When we returned to the house I said: "Mary, I wish to have a talk with you." She looked astonishment. I told her who I was. She went both from joy and sorrow. She asked for my parent and all she could think of. I told her my parents had both deceased. She gave an outline of her life, which accorded with that which I had heard. She did not seem hopeful of the future.

The young man had sobered up, but he seemed reticent, and I thought melancholy. He walked with me to the station. I tried to strengthen him. I told him how long and how well I had known his mother, and that she was my relative. He appeared thoroughly penitent, and voluntarily pledged his honor as a man that he would quit drink and devote his life to the care and comfort of his aged and feeble mother. I had no faith. At my request he promised to write me inside of a year and tell me of the family; but from that hour to this I have not heard one word.

THE BETTING IN NEW YORK.

Some of the Wagers Made There on the Result of Election.

A good many people pin considerable faith to bets—the betting to tell which way election is going. The following from yesterday's New York Herald, an independent paper, can be taken for what it is worth as showing the feeling on the result in New York:

"I'll bet you $1,000 even that Harrison is elected," cried a blonde man with a stove-pipe hat to an elderly capitalist who was trying to get his money up on the result in New York state.

"No, I won't bet that way," said the old man, shaking his finger. "If Cleveland can't carry New York he's beaten anyway. But I'll put up $1,000 against $600 that he carries the state, or I'll bet $250 to $500 that he gets 10,000 majority in New York state or $500 to $1,000 that his majority is 20,000."

"Why should we bet even?" said a Cleveland man. "Everybody admits that this is going to be a very close election. It may be a repetition of the Hayes-Tilden vote. Well, what is the result? The matter goes to congress, all bets are declared off and betting people have their labor for their pains, and besides are obliged to pay the stakeholders a commission on either side of the game. Now, that's the reason the democrats are not covering any even money on the general result."

On the other hand Cleveland money at odds of 100 to 70 was going hot and fast on the result in the state. The biggest bet of the day was made by Michael F. Dwyer, who wagered $20,000 against $12,000 that Cleveland would carry New York state. The short end of the bet was taken by a representative of a syndicate of Philadelphia republicans. John Daly, a well-known sporting man, is stakeholder.

Col. Henry Swords, sergeant-at-arms of the republican national committee, said that there would be lots more Harrison money to wager on the general result within the next 48 hours. Col. John L. Hill, of Philadelphia, is credited with having wagered $9,000 on Harrison's election yesterday, and to have offered any part of $15,000 more, getting no takers. "Davy" Martin denies the story that he has $40,000 of republican money to bet, but says that he will put up some money to back his convictions.

On the other hand, Theatrical Manager John Stetson, of Boston, called at democratic national headquarters yesterday and said he had $30,000 on deposit at the Fremont house to bet in any part, or in a lump sum that Russell would be re-elected governor of Massachusetts. Mr. Stetson added that the state would give a good account of itself for Cleveland and Stevenson.

"Ed" Kearney had succeeded up to yesterday in placing nearly $20,000 on the democratic ticket. As to the general result he has accepted even money, his bets consisting of $7,000 in one sum, $2,000 in another, four bets of $1,000 each and several minor ones of $100 each.

On the vote of this state Mr. Kearney has laid $1,000 to $700 twice and $100 to $70 five times. He says there is certainly more cash forthcoming from the republican side than from the democratic, and he would not be surprised if short odds were given on the republican ticket.

Probably the shrewest and best informed bookmaker in the United States is "Butch" Hampson, who presides over the destinies of the White Elephant pool room. "Butch" has a leaning toward republicanism. He has had a bet on every election since he came here, a butcher boy, from Scandinavia, many years ago. He never lost an election bet. He is betting on Cleveland this year.

Only three small bets were made on the Stock Exchange yesterday, one of $500 to $400 on Cleveland's carrying New York state, and two of $1,000 even on the general result.

As He Discovered Afterward.

On his proud face there played a smile,
As up the street he marched in style.

With pompousness and arrogance
He noted many a passer's glance.

And still his lips grew sharper curled—
He felt his value to the world.

But what made him seem a man of note
Was that his necktie climbed his throat.

"John," called out Mrs. Billus, "are you ready to put in those new curtain fixtures?" "I am beginning to put them up now, Maria," was the response that came in a metallic tone of voice from the parlor. "Children," said Mrs. Billus, with nervous haste, "run out and play!"

A GEOGRAPHY FOR THE BLIND.

A geography for blind people has been contrived which enables them to gain a tolerably correct idea of the peculiarities of the earth's surface. The maps are carved from wood or moulded in plaster, and accurately present the inequalities of the surface of the country. Mountains are of course represented by ridges in the map, oceans, rivers and lakes by perfectly smooth, glassy surface, while a little group of toy houses represents a city.—Golden Days.

CAMELS IN ARIZONA.

Descendants of a Herd of Fifteen "Ships of the Desert" Brought Over by the Government.

The original number of 15 in the herd of wild camels that runs on the Arizona desert between Yuma and Ehrenburg and the Colorado river on the east and west, a correspondent of the San Francisco Chronicle writes, has increased to more than 60, notwithstanding that a number of them have been captured and taken away by circus representatives, and the prospectors kill them every time they have the opportunity.

The original 15 were brought to this country at the instigation of the United States government before the war, for the purpose of packing military stores across the desert, and they were used for that purpose for two or three years.

It was found that the pebbles and bowlders were too severe for their feet, and while they did very well on the sand of the desert, as soon as they reached the foothills their feet became so sore that the animals were unable to travel, and finally they were turned loose to take care of themselves.

For a number of years there were no white men through the part of the desert in which they ranged, and, as the Indians were very superstitious about them, they were not molested until within the last few years, when they had increased to more than one hundred. Later on they became a source of annoyance to the prospectors on account of the fear the horses had of them, and then they began killing off the camels.

I well remember the first time I saw them. I was coming across from the Colorado to the Harqua Hala on foot, with my supplies and cooking utensils packed on a burro that had seen long service in that line of business. I was only provided with water enough for myself, and on account of not having had anything to drink for a day and night, the burro was pretty stupid—so much so that now and then I had to throw a stone to keep him going.

We were coming through a vast expanse of greasewood, almost as high as my shoulders, when suddenly the burro stopped, raised his head and gave a snort that could have been heard half a mile. I thought it must be Indians, and, throwing a cartridge into my Winchester, took cover in the brush.

Peering over the top of the wheels, I soon saw the camels coming with their peculiar swinging trot, showing only their heads and humps above the brush.

That burro evinced more life than I had ever seen him show before, and I don't think any horse in the country could have outrun him. My pack broke open in the first one hundred yards, and meat, beans, coffee and tools were all scattered for five miles.

The camels went on their way, and it was several years before I saw one of them again, when one of them was captured and brought into Phoenix, where it finally died.—Waverly Magazine.

HOW IT FEELS TO DIE.

"I was reading an article on how it feels to die," said Dr. W. H. Epworth, now at the Southern. "No living man can tell how death feels, or whether the actual act of dissolution is accomplished by sensation or not. A man, who, through disease or casualty, has lost consciousness—has become, to all appearances, dead—and is then resuscitated, can really tell us nothing about it, for he did not die. The machinery did not come to a complete standstill—the life force did not leave the body. It may be that the poet has dipped deeper than the physician into the awful mystery of death. It may be that he has described terrors not visible to the eyes of the medical man, who interests himself only in the condition of the animal mechanism. I have stood by the deathbed of men who told me they were going to hell, and saw them pass peacefully to their long sleep. I have looked at their dead faces a few minutes later, and saw thereon a look of fear, of horror, that was not visible when the heart gave its last faint throb and then stood still.

"I have had others tell almost with their last breath what they were going to heaven. They passed away with wan, weary faces that were pitiful to contemplate, but before they became rigid a smile sweet as an angel's dream overspread the pallid features. The deep lines of suffering faded out, and the aged looked almost youthful, the weary and worn became radiant. What causes this change, which every physician has noticed? When does death occur? We say when the animal machinery stops, when the breath and pulse cease. That is what the doctor calls death, but it may not really be death after all. The spirit may not leave the body, may not take its departure from earth with the last breath, the last faint heart-beat. It may cling for some moments to its shattered tenement before it takes flight, before it faces those terrors or enters into those transcendant glories which the poet has painted. The death of the body, with which doctors only deal, may be but the prelude to a more important act, the departure of the spirit. Science has gone far, but it has not yet lifted the veil of mystery which the Almighty has hung over the couch of death."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

HOW COLUMBUS LOOKED.

"Look here," said a wild-eyed stranger in a shiny threadbare suit, addressing a knot of gentlemen who were discussing in the Lindell rotunda the Genoa festivities—"look here, I'm vexed, perpelxed, puzzled, muddled, off my reckoning, and in a painful state of bewilderment. I've been trying for ten years past to find out what Christopher Columbus looked like. When I was a kid going to school, the history which I studied contained a portrait of him in the important act of discovering Cat Island, and half a dozen bow-legged Indians squinting at him through their fingers. That portrait gave him a full head, square shoulders, a green nose, and the haughty eye of the Castilian don. I accepted this as genuine. I supposed that the man with the kodak was abroad and took a snap shot at Chris just as he was preparing to say to his new copper-colored acquaintances, 'This is the proudest moment of my life.' My nerves were considerably shattered some years later, when I was brought face to face with a copy of the portrait donated to the city of Genoa by Cevasco.

"That makes him look like a Catholic priest who was doing penance for crooking his elbow too much. The Greek nose gives place to a proboscis that resembles a hot roll, and the proud patrician eye to an optic that might be expected to discover nothing more important than the shortest route to the wine cellar.

"Then I came to St. Louis to enjoy the fall festivities, and was introduced to another authentic portrait of the great Genoese. It occupies a prominent position on Olive street. The hot-roll proboscis has given place to a beak, the leery eye to an expression that would not discredit Mr. Booth's Shylock. Instead of the beard of a don, or the smug face of a priest, Columbus looms up with the pointed mustache and goatee of a French dancing-master. Since coming here I have been looking up other authentic portraits of the man who is responsible for the great world's fair, with Sunday-closing controversy attachment, and I find that he resembles pretty much everything and everybody on earth, from a South Sea buccaneer to a natural born d—d fool. I am now convinced that the man who discovered Columbus made a greater hit than Chris did in sighting Cat Island."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

HE WANTED RENEWING.

"It is very kind of you, Mr. Jelly, to ask me to be your wife, but it can never be."

It was a fair young woman who spoke. The man whose doom she had thus sealed had the appearance of a wreck.

She was the two-dozenth woman who had crushed his hopes, and it began to have its effect on him.

He rose from his knees trembling.

She was sorry for him—as women are under such circumstances—but she had done the best she could.

In a few brief moments he recovered his speech.

His lips quavered, but he was bound to say something.

"What shall I do?" he moaned.

The girl shook her head.

"I've asked two dozen women to marry me," he went on, "in the last ten years and every one has sat down on me. Even you have," he sighed, "but now what shall I do? I am completely worn out."

Her face was ablaze and her eyes snapped.

Then she became cold and cruel.

"You had better have yourself upholstered," she replied in a steady voice, and swept out of the room.—Detroit Free Press.

FOR AN OUTDOOR RECEPTION.

'Tis tedious to be always sage
And pose the dignity of age,
While so much of our early lives
On memory's play-ground still survives,
And owns, as at the present hour,
The spell of youth's magnetic power,
But though I feel, with Solomon,
'Tis pleasant to behold the sun,
I would not if I could repeat
A life which still is good and sweet;
I keep in age, as in my prime,
A not uncheerful step with time,
And, grateful for all blessings sent,
I go the common way content
To make no new experiment.
On easy terms with law and fate,
For what must be I calmly wait,
And trust the path I cannot see—
That God is good sufficeth me.
And when at last upon life's play
The curtain falls, I only pray
That hope may lose itself in truth,
And age in heaven's immortal youth,
And all our loves and longing prove
The foretaste of diviner love!

The day is done. Its afterglow
Along the west is burning slow.
My visitors, like birds, have flown;
I hear their voices, fainter grown,
And dimly through the dusk I see,
Their 'kerchiefs wave good-night to me—
Light hearts of girlhood, knowing naught
Of all the cheer their coming brought;
And, in their going, unaware
Of silent-following fees of prayer;
Heaven make their budding promise good
With flowers of gracious womanhood.
—St. Nicholas.

The Case of Mr. Palmer—Pneumonia Carried Him Off Suddenly—Everyone Should Know the Symptoms and be on Guard.

Mr. Wilton R. Palmer, of New York City, left a circle of friends one afternoon recently, and received their congratulations upon his bright and vigorous appearance. That evening he felt a tickling in the throat, a slight pain across the chest, a chilly sensation, and he coughed once or twice. The next day his nostrils were inflamed, his throat sore, his chest pained him, his bones ached and he felt sore all over. The day following he was in bed, with physicians shaking their heads, and the third day he was dead from pneumonia, which he failed to take in time.

There are ten thousand men and women in America to-day in the same condition as Mr. Palmer when leaving his friends, but they do not know it. The slightest appearance of the symptoms above named should strike terror to any man or woman. A sudden cold means the beginning of pneumonia; aches and pains throughout the body are the first symptoms. It is necessary to bring about a reaction at once. How, then, is the best way of bringing about a reaction? Ask any physician and he will tell you to use pure whiskey. No matter how prejudiced any one may be, pure whiskey at such a time is a necessity, but unfortunately there are few pure whiskies in the world, and in fact there is but one that has received the unqualified endorsement of physicians, chemists and the highest authorities, and that is Duffy's Pure Malt. This remarkable whiskey which is sold by all first-class druggists and grocers, will absolutely check the first approach of pneumonia, while at the same time it is certain to build up the wasted system. It deserves to be kept in every household, not only to be used in cases of emergency, but to assist in prolonging life and bringing health and happiness.

Gray squirrels have no more deadly enemy than their red brothers. Last week Peter Bovee was hunting in the region of Danville, Pa., and witnessed a fight to the death between a gray and a red squirrel. The latter whipped, as the red always do, and took possession of the vanquished squirrel's hole in a chestnut tree, thereby getting not only a home but a larder already stored with sweet chestnuts for the whole winter's use. That was a big prize to be won by one fight.

ORIGIN AND PROGRESS.

Of That Instrument of Torture—the Corset.

In the Woman's Columns of last Sunday's New York Sun there appears a very interesting history of the origin and progress of the corset, which will be very interesting to read, and is here reproduced.

Woman's waist, which may be classified as a variable quantity, marvellous in its power of manipulation, is really a discovery of mediaeval times, and not, as popularly believed, a gift of the gods. Sappho lived and died in happy ignorance of the possession that is at once the delight and the despair of the modern world feminine. Penelope the faithful, Aspasia the wise, Iseult the loving, considered not the importance of waist curve and circumference. Brunhild measured not the metres in her horsehair cestus to determine whether they exceeded those which girdled the other dark-haired Valkuries, and Boadicea rallied her Britons with no thought as to the circumference of her corselet of skins. The idea of the waist came in with the luxury and refinement of the Romans, and when those old barbaric women grasped the thought and realized the importance of their possession, straightway they began doing just what women have been doing ever since—trying to improve on the model designed by the Creator—and the germ of the corset was evolved. The barbaric idea of the corset, however, was greatly superior to the more cultured conception of modern times, for it was only a corselet of thick stuff which molded the form, not an instrument of torture which entirely distorted its lines. And the corset triumphs still, despite the enemies arrayed against it, the vigorous and determined attacks of physicians and reformers, the ridicule of artists, the remonstrances of husbands, and the disease and discomfort suffered by its wearers.

The first trace we find of the busked corset, "busquine," is in the ample and majestic dress of the period of Francis I., the day of splendid stuffs and wide flowing sleeves lined with sable.

Catharine de Medicis, as might have been expected, was instrumental in introducing a corset of steel and velvet, by means of which her ladies achieved an undesirable girth of 13 inches, and this corset, in some of its forms, was worn by the men as well as the women of the court which followed hers. Still a little later the fashionable lady was strapped up in a rigid corset strongly armed with whalebone, which came down in a deep point upon her skirt all of a piece without any indication of slope. It must be admitted that as indemnity for this piece of torture, the ladies wore their bodices cut down to a point so low that the pope threatened them with excommunication for immodesty. And so the torture grew and increased until the corset was of thin boards covered with cloth laced down the back and pressing the flesh until it was bruised and sore. Even in the days of the "unbraced cestus" of the Regency, where the fashionable gown hung straight from the shoulder, with neither girdle nor bodice, and the lady on the promenade looked as though she had come out in her dressing gown, the corset confined the waist beneath the flowing Watteau garment.

During the years of the Greek and Roman renaissance in Paris, when in thoughtlessness rather than immodesty, the delirium of pleasure after the delirium of blood, Josephine de Beauharnais and her friends walked the Champs Elysees in Athenian dress, with bare arms and uncovered shoulders, defying disease as they had defied the guillotine, or bearing bravely the pleurisy and pneumonia they contracted in their thin fichus, the corset fell into desuetude for a time, but was speedily rescued, to be more and more honored and beautified as the chief essential of fashionable dress. It has remained for the modern woman to make of the steel girdle an ornamental device, masking its misery in a covering of most exquisite brocade or lustrous satin, frilling its edges with fine and beautiful laces, hand-wrought and exquisite, and clasping its cruel steels with gold and jeweled links of diamonds and rubies. As high as $5 and $6 is paid for a certain cut of seam, shape of gusset made up in plain gray coutille, and not only this, but a woman of any pretension to fastidiousness must have her corset made to order, and will not wear a shop-made article, any more than a man of fashion will tolerate store clothes and ready-made linen. The corset now must match the silk petticoat, as women wear no longer the little underbodice of linen or cambric, lest it interfere with the fit of the gown or add a hair's breadth to the size of the waist. The laces are of silken webbing, bright and beautiful in color, and the materials include all the brocades, the tartans, the changeable taffetas, the shot silks and satins in plain tints. The prices cover the ground between $5 and $50. It remains, too, for the modern man to discover the raison d'etre for the corset, which has been ever anathematized as the sign manual of feminine vanity and frivolity. And the man has said, with the brutal sarcasm of his kind, "The corset is charged with hurting woman and at times with killing her. But is this to its discredit? Already there is an excess of uncorseted shes. War and travel keep the number of men within wholesome limits, and perhaps the great use of the corset is that it does, less effectually, the same by women."—New York Sun.

IN OLDEN TIMES

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action, but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

She Has a Sharp Tongue That Men Are Much Afraid of.

The sarcastic maiden is not a pleasant companion. She is too sharp to be agreeable.

Her cutting speeches, rife with scathing personalities, cause her to be shunned rather than selected as one of those charming sort of girls men and women both admire.

If she writes a letter, her pen seems to have been dipped in vinegar, and though her composition may be the very acme of elegance, still such an epistle is not received with the warmth that one of those gushing, girlyfied but altogether friendly ones always obtains.

The sarcastic girl may possess talent far above the breezy creature who candidly admits that she would rather read one of "The Duchess'" novels than an essay of Emerson's.

She may be able to converse in seven different languages. She may be as beautiful as an houri, but men will be afraid of that sharp tongue, and the purely feminine creature who weeps and laughs by turns with Phyllis and Molly Bawn will win in the admiration and preside over the home of the greatest catch of the season, while her more brilliant sister, with her dangerous sharpness, will be left to her sarcasms and solitudes.

Sarcasm is not wit, though wit may be sarcastic.

One can be right and say all manner of clever things without hurting the feelings of others by keen knife-edged opinions that are subtle with bitterness and teeming with gall.

Sarcasm is not a quality to be cultivated.

It is a rank weed that once started grows and grows, choking out the little plants of kindliness, forethought and consideration until it overruns the garden of the mind, dominating and controlling each thought with a disagreeable pungent odor that cannot be eradicated.

The wisest course in politics is to vote for the best man, and you cannot be mistaken. So, in the use of blood-purifiers, you can't be mistaken if you take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, because all parties agree that it is the best—the Superior Medicine. Try it this month.

Three causes of earthquakes have been assigned. The first is that the earthquake is caused by an upward movement of the superficial layers of the earth's crust induced by expansion of steam or gas in volcanic districts. In support of this, it is claimed that earthquakes are common in volcanic districts and rare elsewhere. Mount St. Helena is an extinct volcano, beyond doubt. There is the subsidence theory, which holds that the continuous contraction of the earth in cooling produces subterranean fissures, faults and landslides. The new theory is that an earthquake is a terrestrial thunder storm, in proof of which many good arguments have been adduced.

SUGGESTIONS FOR DRAPERIES.

Draperies ought to show a darker shade of the wall color or contrast pleasingly with it in the case of window curtains. Thus soft yellow india or china silk is admirable with almost every style of furniture and decoration. It is the color of sunshine that seems to light up the rooms on the north side of the house as nothing else can do, says the Decorator and Furnisher.

A dull light green is suitable for the windows of a room finished in rose color or yellow, because a green light sifting through the windows is always pleasant to the eye. But combined with it as a relief ought to be the dull pink of the apple blossom, or the complexion of the inmates will suffer.

One of the prettiest of all window draperies is ivory or cream silk, well covered with bunches of apple blossoms and leaves in delicate colors, but of course it is only suitable for a drawing room or ladies' boudoir. On the other hand, for a general sitting room or gentlemen's smoking room, jute burlap or hanging is suitable. The dark forms of these materials can be relieved by appliques of carmine velvet edged with gold thread, or by arabesques in gold and blue.

Curtains are now often looped back by fancy cord matching in color, apparently passing through pompons of the same or contrasting color. Some I saw recently in fawn color or dark crimson closely resembling small circular strung sponges at equal distances. These pompons are about the size of a Tangerine orange. Drapery for mantel shelves has gone out of fashion, and a handsome length of brocade edged with a ball fringe laid on the slab is suitable. Where there are handsome oak or marble mantelpieces this is an improvement. The large cushions retain their popularity, and frequently an unused bed pillow is covered and converted into a handsome sofa cushion.

A favorite fashion is throwing a large square or length of any brocade or embroidered material over couches and chairs and plain cushions. These squares are sometimes given as christening presents to babies. They are worked, edged with lace and intended to throw over the child when asleep on a bed.

SIZE OF THE UNIVERSE.

Staggering Figures Showing the Largeness of the Locality in Which We and Other Solar Systems Live.

To form some idea of the largeness of this earth one may look upon the landscape from the top of an ordinary church steeple and then bear in mind that one must view 900,000 similar landscapes to get an approximately correct idea of the size of the earth.

Place 500 earths like ours side by side yet Saturn's outermost ring could easily enclose them. Three hundred thousand earth globes could be stored inside the sun, if hollow. If a human eye every hour were capable of looking upon a fresh measure of world material 14,000 square kilometers large, that eye would need 55,000 years to overlook the surface of the sun.

To reach the nearest fixed star one must travel 33,000,000,000 of kilometers, and if the velocity were equal to that of a cannon ball it would require 5,000,000 of to travel the distance.

On a clear night an ordinary human eye can discover about 1,000 stars in the northern hemisphere, most of which send their light from distances which we cannot measure. How large they must be!

Round these 1,000 stars circle 50,000 other stars of various sizes. Besides single stars we know of systems of stars moving round one another.

Still, we are but a short way into space as yet! Outside our limits of vision and imagination there are, no doubt, still larger spaces.

The milky way holds probably at least 20,191,000 stars, and as each is a sun, we presume it is encircled by at least 50 planets. Counting up these figures, we arrive at the magnitude of 1,000,955,000 stars.

A thousand million of stars! Who can comprehend it? Still, this is only a part of the universe. The modern telescopes have discovered more and similar milky ways still farther away. We know of some 6,000 nebulae which represent milky ways like ours.

Let us count 2,000 of them as being of the size of our milky way, then 2,000x 20,191,000x40, 82,000,000 suns, or 2,019,100,000,000 heavenly bodies. Suppose these bodies parading before our mental eye, one per minute, it would require 3,840,000 years to finish the march in all of which time we would have to look upon them unceasingly.

Suppose a human being migrating from globe to globe and spending 50 years on each, he would require 100,955,000,000,000 years for the round. If he stayed only one hour he would save much time, but still need 230,400,000 years for the task. Yet these nebulae are only a part of the universe!

Outside the nebulae limits we know of other nebulae not resolvable into stars. They appear to be primitive nebulae, pure, unused world-stuff matter for new creations. Some of them occupy a space as large as the orbit of Uranus.

Some are still larger. The one in "Orion" is estimated to be 2,200,000,000,000,000,000 times larger than that of our sun. Are we coming to the outermost limits? Who dares say yes? We are probably come to our limits.

But the future, with new instruments and scientific devices, may push those limits so much farther into space.—Nordstjernen, Copenhagen.

NATURAL CANDLE LIGHTS

Indians Use a Curious Fish for Light and Food.

A fish dealer in the California market had on his slab yesterday two specimens of a fish not frequently seen in our markets, but plenty from Vancouver Island northward.

In plain commericial language it is known as the candle fish. Technically the name is Thaleichthys Pacificus, a remarkable species of the family Salmonidae, strictly a sea fish approaching the coast to spawn, but never entering the rivers, says the San Francisco Call.

The specimens that were shown yesterday measured a foot in length, and have somewhat the appearance of an eel, except the head, which is pointed and conical. It has a large mouth. The color is greenish on the back, passing into silvery white on the sides and belly, which is sparsely spotted with dirty yellow.

The Indians of Vancouver Island and vicinity use the fish both for food and light. It is the fattest of most oleaginous of all fishes, and, it is said, of all animals. It is impossible to either boil or fry it, for the moment it is subjected to heat it turns to oil.

The Indians who use the fish for food, take them, and, without cleaning them, run a skewer through the eyes and suspend them in the thick smoke that arises from wood fires.

The fish acquires the flavor of the wood and the smoke helps to preserve it. When the Indians want to make a meal of the fish they heat them, reduce them to oil and drink the oil.

When they want a light they take a dried fish, draw through it a piece of rush pith or a strip from the upper bark of the cypress tree, a species of arbor vitae, as a wick, a needle of hard wood being used for the purpose.

The fish is then lighted at one end and burns steadily until consumed.

The cost of shouting "Vive la France!" one time in Alsace-Lorraine has been fixed at 20 marks. Joseph Eugene Lemoine, a journalist who lives in France but gave utterance to his patriotic feeling in Metz, has just found this out.
